Friday May 24 1996

l ne Gialardiai

Printed in London, Manchester, Frankfurt and Roubaix

Arts, books and music

Interview: Claes Oldenburg

Manic Street Preachers' return Richey

Plus: the physics of Star Trek

Public vs private care

Margaret Drabble: who will pay for my old age?

This section page 9

Lord Taylor: 'Never in the history of our criminal law have such farreaching proposals been put forward on the strength of such flimsy and dubious evidence

Lord Donaldson, former Master of the Rolls: 'It is as deplorable as it is unprecedented. I can find nothing in the conduct of the judiciary which justifies this lack of Lord Beistead, chairman of the parole board, former leader of the Lords, and ex-Home Office minister: 'The Home Secretary is really in practical grave danger of jeopardising the main aim of the White Paper'

Lord Carlisle, former Tory Home Office minister: The proposals are unjustified by argument, illogical and badly thought through, It won't be an increase of 10,000 but something like 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the prison population. Where are they going to

Lord Carr, former Conservative Home Secretary: 'The Government cannot just go into reverse like this without explaining to the public why they were fundamentally wrong six years ago and are now fundamentally right'

Lord Windlesham former Conservative Home Office minister and ex-Parole Board chairman: 'The essentially punitive strategy it sets out is misconceived and is likely to prove counterproductive'

Lord Elton, former Tory Home Office minister: 'I find myself more and more convinced this is the wrong battle, fought on the wrong grounds at the wrong time'

Lord Williams of Mostyn, Labour, former chairman of the Bar Council: 'It is as perversion of justice. It is an infinite shame, that matters of this sort are dealt with on the basis of mottoes at party conferences. It demeans our society'

'A perversion of justice'

HE Tory Estab-lishment last with Britain's senior judges to launch a persistent and devastating attack on Michael Howard sealing his reputation as Brit ain's worst Home Secretary for nearly 40 years.

The unprecedented on-slaught yesterday from the legal establishment was led by the retiring Lord Chief Justice, Lord Taylor, and was his betrayal of 12 years of Conservative policies by former Tory ministers. our att

House of Lords marked the day that the Establishment made plain it would no longer Secretary whose three years in office have been marked by style authoritarian penal poli-cies, and repeated defeats in

Not since Henry Brooke in the 1950s, whose repeated blunders over capital punish-ment and prison escapes led to his defeat at a general elec-tion, has there been a home secretary whose policies have provoked such widespread criticism within and without the criminal justice system Mr Howard's refusal to apologise or change course on display again last night — further underlined the knowledge that John Major canno sack him without opening up an entirely new internal party dispute which would threaten to engulf the entire

The sustained onslaught in the House of Lords centred on Mr Howard's white paper pro-posing the introduction of US-bases. An alert intelligence system could put together useful information from this.

"There are no credible reports of successful attacks on classified systems," said Jim Christy, director of computer security for the US air force. That, he noted, was the to Mr Howard that he faces cided to stage the special from Lord Taylor, who is seri-ously ill, gave a clear warning

> The shallow and untested figures in the white paper do not describe fairly and clearly the problems the Government

Lord Taylor said he had de-seeks to address --- still less do they justify the radical "solutions" it huge difficulties in getting his House of Lords debate despite flagship law and order bill on his illness because he beto the statute book before the lieved "it was important for me, while still holding the The Lord Chancellor, Lord office of Lord Chief Justice, to Mackay, tried to defend the Home Secretary's policy last inform the House directly of the very grave consequences' of the Home Secretary's pack-age. His successor will be an-proposes'

night on the grounds that it was justified by public opin-ion, but he admitted that the "some 25 or 30 letters" from nounced today.

The introduction of mandathe public since the white tory minimum sentences for paper was published in April 'divided almost equally berepeat burglars and drug dealers "quite simply must involve a denial of justice", tween those who support the proposals and those find fault". he said. It amounted to the jettisoning of government pol-icy spelled out five years ago which rejected minimum sen-

Mr Howard, who also clearly believes it remains a vote winner, was unabashed. He admitted he was limiting more guilty people going free.
That policy was "self-evidently wise, fair and just" and he went on to ask "why every the historic discretion of the courts but said the judges "My over-riding responsi-bility is to give the ordinary citizens the protection they one of those propositions of government policy so recently propounded is now

The valedictory speech ection from the courts," he adequate research: "Never in message from the Govern-from Lord Taylor, who is seriously ill, gave a clear warning Lord Taylor said he had delaw have such far-reaching the judges. proposals been put forward on the strength of such flimsy and dubious evidence," he said. "The shallow and untested figures in the white paper do not describe fairly and clearly the problems the Government the problems the Government seeks to address — still less do they justify the radical 'solutions' it proposes.

"Judges need the ability to tailor the sentence to the offence — to make the punishment fit the crime," said Lord Taylor.

"It connect he wight for a seek for a seek seeks to be consequent for the sentence of the seeks to be seeks "It cannot be right for sentences to be passed without regard to the gravity, fre-quency, consequences or other circumstances of the offending." The real public concern had served. about the risks of releasing a tiny minority of dangerous criminals could be better met

The Lord Chief Justice found support from every cor-ner of the House of Lords with the former Master of the Rolls, Lord Donaldson, argu-ing that Mr Howard's white paper demonstrated an un-precedented and deplorable Leader comment, page 8

ment to the public not to trust the judges.
Former Tory cabinet ministers, the chairman of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, the president of Victim Support and former and current chairmen of the Parole Board gave similar acerbic warnings of the devastating consequences on crime, on the prison popula-tion and on the criminal justice of the introduction of Mr

Howard's package. Lord Carr, former Tory home secretary, went further and felt the Home Secretary owed Parliament and the tion. His package overturned the policies announced in 1990 of a Conservative govern-ment in which Mr Howard

"I do not believe the Government, on such a vital matby other ways of assessing like this without explaining their risk to the public. public as a whole, very much more deeply ... why they were wrong, not just a little bit wrong, but fundamentally wrong, six years ago and are now fundamentally right."

750000

Save up to 30% on home insurance.

A large number of homes already do.

More than three quarters of a million. That's how many people have already made significant savings with us by cutting out the middleman.

Our policy is approved by all the major banks and building societies - we just cut the cost,

need and deserve from the actions of some of the most to be jettisoned and replaced by its exact opposite?" dangerous and persistent criminals. I do not believe they are getting that prot- unworkable and based on instyle "three strikes and dangerous and persistent criminals. I do not believe they are getting that you're out" law and order protection from the courts' Datastream Cowboy fixes the Pentagon in his sights

Martin Walker in Washington

660

HE Pentagon's computers were infiltrated le0,000 times by hackers last year, a United States gov-ernment agency has told Con-gress after a long investiga-tion provoked by a 16-year-old British hacker known as the Datastream Cowboy.

As many as 250,000 attacks were made on the Pentagon computers and two out of three succeeded, according to the general accounting office. the federal government's watchdog, which conducted its own hacking operations and a survey of the Pentatems Agency. The Pentagon detected only dollar nuisance to defence," the general accounting office

ists or other adversaries could seize control of defence information systems and seri-ously degrade the nation's gon's test attacks mounted by the Defence Information Sys-tems Agency. ability to deploy and sustain military forces," the report added.

The Pentagon played down one in 25 of the test attacks, and even then fewer than a third were reported.

the alarms, claiming that only unclassified data bases were at risk. Classified secu-"At a minimum, these rity networks are kept in attacks are a multi-million guarded buildings, with data guarded buildings, with data access links screened and encoded and monitored.
"We are not taking lightly

the general accounting outcome the general accounting outcome the concluded, acknowledging that most had no criminal intent. "At worst, they are a serious threat to works," said Pentagon spokeswoman Susan Hansen.

"But we have confidence in specified." "In some extreme scenar- "But we have confidence in ios, studies show that terror- the security of our classified The unclassified systems contain information on subjects such as the weather, good news. The bad news was that "you can't fly and fight without unclassified systems". The main fear is that hack-ers can obtain the passwords and access codes to leapfrog into high security computer systems — the trick being systems — the unca systems — the unca systems — the unca system 6 spare parts inventories, maintenance and repair schedules, and logistics for military untangling 15 untangling US defence Web were being soft.

Web address, or URL (unform resource locator), could be worth a few taps on the keyboard. But this was the first disappointment. "Pentagon" brought up 20,000 clues through AltaVista, which searches the Net with a key word.

So, it was off to the White House Web site, and yes, there it was, the Pentagon listed under the "Interac-tive Citizen's Guidebook" of Federal services. This route provided an address MISSION impossible? that linked to the Pentagon. Hell, no, writes Bill And it was the first section ONeil. First let's check out of that lengthy URL the Pentagon's Web site. (www.dtic.dla.mil) that They're not going to let you in by this front door, but its puters that was possibly inweb address, or URL (uniside the organisation's HQ. side the organisation's HQ. Using Telnet, a program that allows you to log on to a computer remotely, con-nection was swift. Back came a unique number that identifies the computer, and we waited for the logon

> ent and Letters 8 Obituaries 10

Crossword 15; Westher 16; Radio 16; TV 16

0141 226 8877

not the cover. Call now for a quote.

0181 686 8877 MANCHESTER

0117 945 8877

Inside

lailed for covering up the murders of his parents on Jersey is out of . jall and may inherit their tortone

World News Boris Yeltsin is to meet reber Chechen leaders in Moscow as hopes rise of a breakthrough to the conflict in Gullariess Malion paid Malthew Corbett £104 million for the intellectual rights to Scoty, the glove puppet whose best friend'is Sweep.

readled themselves to face all long Kong Selectatheir final warm up to Egro 196.

England strolled ...

over China and to a 3-0 victory

Sketch

Hall's well that ends well, ma'am

Maev Kennedy

ORE than three years after the bonfire that lit up her Annus Horribilis, the Queen's great state hall at Windsor Castle is still a forest of scaffolding poles.
The desolation, all the tourists see when they peer through the glass door from the intact apartments next door, is deceptive.

Above the scaffolding in St George's Hall, the largest green oak Gothic ceiling built this century is nearing completion. In another two years, guests at state banquets should be able to sit down to dinner beneath it. John Tiltman, director of the restoration project for the royal household, promised yesterday that Windsor Castle will have fully recovered from the fire by spring 1988, on schedule and slightly under the £40 million budget. He wasn't rash enough to promise how much under He paid generous tribute to the English Heritage archaeol ogists. They were so fanatically thorough in sifting the sodden charred mountains of rubble - in some rooms the rubble consisted of modern bedrooms and staff bathrooms, which crashed down through layers of medieval, 17th, 18th and 19th century ceilings — that they virtually dug out the foundations for free for the reconstruction. Giles Downes is too tactful to say so to the Queen, but he thinks her hall will be better than before the fire. Wyattville's early 19th

Gothic roof was plaster, and uncomfortably shallow for the 70 metre length of the hall he made by knocking the 17th hall and chapel together.

The new self-supporting green oak ceiling adds two etres of height to the room. Medieval construction techniques for green oak, cut straight from the felled tree and then left to shrink, dry and season in position, had to

The 14-truss ceiling uses 70 massive Hereford oak trees. Mr Downes, nervous of being accused of tree abuse, has checked, and says that 110,000 oaks are harvested every year in Britain, but more are

"It is not a copy of gothic. but a modern reinterpretation of the gothic spirit," he said. Contemporary architects had clamoured for the hall to be rebuilt to a modern design.
"But so much of what survive is gothic, they would both have made one another look

John Thorneycroft, English Heritage's chief adviser on royal palaces, climbs the scaf-folding for a last look at fragments of a lost masterpiece. Just before Christmas he was ready to shout "Stop!" An archaeologist cleaned a shadow on a piece of plaster, and saw what Mr Thorney-

croft calls "cabbage-ish leaves" emerge, and then an They were fragments of Antonio Verrio's mural of Christ Healing the Sick, for Charles II's chapel, the most importan English commission for the Italian artist English Heritage thought a significant section had survived, and would somehow have to be incorporated in the

When they returned to work after Christmas, they found some swags of flowers and fruit, fragments of a painted pillar, and a man's face, but all the rest was gone. The fragments have been conserved. carefully recorded, and are about to vanish again behind the new walls.

The workmen say most members of the royal family have shinned up the three flights of scaffolding steps for closer look at their new roof

One of the biggest jobs is now invisibly complete. The walls and floors have finally dried out: quenching the rag-ing fire involved pouring in over 1,500,000 million gallons of water. Indeed, the restorers say,

Windsor is probably now dried than ever before in its history

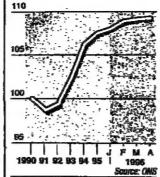

This news provoked tre-mendous excitement on the part of one American journal-ist became tremendously excited at this news: "An

Economy limits scope for a giveaway budget, CBI warns the Chancellor

Sarah Ryle and Larry Elliott

USINESS leaders today warned the Chancellor, Kenneth Clarke, that slow eco-nomic growth and the hole in the Government's finances rule out all but the most modest tax cuts in the last Budget before the election. The Confederation of British Industry said a £2 billion giveaway — smaller than last year's £3 billion reduction and equivalent to just over a penny off the basic rate of 24p in the pound — was afford-able but would have to be offset by £1 billion of savings. The CBI's analysis was based on the weakness of manufacturing, which it believes will restrict growth to 2 per cent this year, well below the Treasury's forecast of 3 per cent expansion. Retail sales

Because of subdued price expectations for factory goods, combined with other forecasts for the economy, the CBI expects continuing low inflation, muted earnings year, with borrow growth and a slow fall in unpegged at 6 per cent.

GDP

the end of the year But it said that despite the slowdown, there would be no further interest rate cuts this months of the year, requiring growth of 1.25 per cent in each of the next quarters if the Government is to hit its 3

The shadow trade and industry secretary, Margaret Beckett, sald the problem was a lack of investment, while the CBI highlighted the impact of recession in Europe on manufacturing exports.

The CBI's monthly snap-shot of the manufacturing sector showed weak demand for factory goods will con-tinue to subdue this part of

More factories reported high levels of stocks than in the previous survey, and with orders at their lowest since December 1993, the CBI said they expected manufacturers to meet what demand there was with existing goods.

The CBI believes factory output will grow by just 1 per cent in 1996, but that Mr

Analysts said the outlook of faster expansion next year or high street spending was if he can cling on until the end of the Parliament. With the cost of the BSE crisis set to add £0.5 billion to the Public Sector Borrowing Requirement this year, the CBI said the budget deficit would come down slowly from £31.9 billion in 1995-96 to £26.1 billion in 1996-97.

The effect of the global ban on British beef is also likely to re-inforce the current poor performance of UK trade. Office for National Statistics data yesterday showed that imports grew faster than ex-ports in the first quarter of this year, holding back growth to just 0.4 per cent. CBI chief economist Kate

Barker said stronger sumer spending should help to keep the economy ticking over but added that there were no signs of a re-tun of the late 1980s boom.

Murder plot son is out of jail and in the money

Murder victims Elizabeth and Nicholas Newall

Fewer than two years after going to prison, a man who covered up his parents' death can inherit a fortune

lan MacKinnon

FORMER financier jailed for helping his hrother to cover up the murder of their wealthy parents in Jersey is free to in-herit part of the family for-tune after being freed less

Home Office sources said months after being convicted, because the time he spent in

The early release of Mr burying his parents' bodies after they were bludgeoned to death, means he can now inherit a share of his parents' £1 million estate after an earlier court attempt to prevent him becoming a beneficiary of the will was withdrawn while he was in prison.

Mr Newall and his brother

Their parents, Nicholas Newall, aged 56, and Elizabeth, aged 46, were battered to death with a blunt instrument during a drunken argu-Newall, aged 30, who admittment at their home in St Breamy crime. In January 1991, ted destroying evidence and lade's Bay after a birthday the brothers successfully ap-

Mark Newall (left) and his brother Roderick at their parents' funeral. They were later charged over their parents' deaths

Roderick, aged 31, who is serving a life sentence in La brothers had buried the have their parents declared lieved to have invested the lodges and concealed the evidence of the violent assault, in August 1994.

celebration. But because the pealed to the Jersey courts to ditted from Paris in 1993, is besidered lieved to have invested the lieved to have invested the lieved to have invested the lieved to have secreted who investigated the murders for two years before retiring in August 1994. were dealing with a double murder for more than a of Morocco in 1992.

Even then, there was no evidence to link the pair to

£180,000 yacht and in fighting a long legal battle against extradition from Gibraltar, where he was taken after a dramatic arrest off the coast But Mark, who was extra-to prevent the brothers inheriting the money were dropped, Roderick issued a to stop Mark becoming a ben- has served."

over Mark's release

"He and his brother, cost this island and the authoristatement from prison saying ties a tremendous amount of he did not wish to benefit, but money. The investigation there is nothing in Jersey law took longer than the time he

First night

Local angle on the moral maze

The Other Place, Stratford

OT since Edward Bond's Bingo has Strat-ford staged such a local play as Peter Whelan's The Herbal Bed: most of the action takes place round the corner from the theatre at Hall's Croft. But, although the plot revolves around an action for slander brought by Shake-speare's daughter, Susanna in 1613, the real fascination of this gripping play lies in a much larger issue: the conflict between sexual passion and puritan conscience The bare facts are that Susanna took a laddish local gent to the consistory court at Worcester Cathedral for claiming that she had "the running of the reins and had en naught with Rafe Smith at John Palmer": in other words, that she had gonort hoea and had committed adultery at a private house in

Out of this Whelan weaves an intriguing piece of histori-cal speculation. His Susanna, chafing at the restrictions of her marriage to a dedicated physician, John Hall, is genu-inely drawn to a local haberdasher, Rafe Smith: the two of them are caught on the verge of coition in Hall's herb garden by a servant. But when Jack Lane, who has been sacked as Hall's apprentice, embroiders the story and puts it about in a local pub, the three parties involved brazen the matter out and take him to court, resulting in a trial scene Whelan does much more than deck out a piece of titivating historical gossip. Su-

Michael Billington
sanna, who has her father's gift for dissembling, represents the conflict between passion and survival. Hall and Smith, both religious puritans, show how conscience can be trimmed by expediency: the former for the sake of his medical practice and the latter to save Susanna. The one character of fixed princi-ple is the Vicar-General who carries out the ruthless court interrogation. Whelan's great strength is that he sees the vices and virtues of all parties; at one extreme, Susanna's belief in self fulfilment drives her to implicate a servant in lies, and at the other, her interroga-tor's devotion to truth hints at the zealotry that would eventually lead to the closing of the Even though the language sometimes veers uneasily be-tween ancient and modern (with the court official talking of wanting to "wrap it up"), Whelan's play offers an engrossing moral conundrum. Michael Attenborough's production, played against a Robert Jones set that is a mixture of wattle and medical workshop, is also vehemently acted. Teresa Banham's Susanna is a very English blend of outward propriety and inner fire and Liam Cunningham and Joseph Flennes, as respectively husband and lover, reveal the cost of tight-lipped self-preservation.

But for me the performance of the evening comes from Stephen Boxer, who as the Vicar-General brilliantly displays an implacable certainty that suggests convictions are both prisons and a source of moral strength.

At The Other Place (01789-295623).

Neutral Europe helped Nazis hide war loot

Martin Walker in Washington

EHE declassification by the United States National Archives of thousands of previously secret documents is throwing up accusations that compa-nies and financial institutions in neutral European countries worked hand in hand with the Nazis to hide The material is providing the first serious confirmation that Nazi leaders and German industrialists conspired in other assets to Switzerland to finance the post-war revival of a Nazi-led German empire. The International Red Cross, leading Swiss and Swedish banks and corpora-tions, and the family of the Swedish diplomatic hero Raoul Wallenberg, who helped save up to 20,000 Hungarian Jews, are accused in the documents of enthusiastic co-operation with the Nazis.

Among those named are the wiss banks Credit Suisse and Union Bank, and the shoe company Bally, which is accused of taking over Jewish companies selzed by the Nazis. Among the most tantalising of the documents is one from 1944 that recounts a secret meeting in Strasbourg at which Nazi leaders told Ger-man industrialists the war was lost and ordered the busi- | counts, the holdings and the nessmen to finance an underground network aimed at restoring the party to power.

Stunned researchers from the World Jewish Congress, looking for evidence to buttress their case for the restitu-tion of looted Jewish property, have found themselves stumbling over documents which can destroy reputations, imperil fortunes and leopardise international

"It is incredible, astounding. Every day we are getting extraordinary material that has just been sitting there in the archives," Elan Steinberg. executive director of the World Jewish Congress, told

There are claims that the Red Cross helped Nazi officials smuggle their ill-gotten gains across the border into Switzerland in diplomatic pouches. The Enskilda bank, run by the Wallenberg family, is said to have helped finance German industry without collateral, and to have acted as a money-laundering network to conceal German investments and holdings in US industries.

"Here we have a document from the US treasury which shows that the treasury secretary Harry Moremathen authorized. tary Henry Morgenthau authorised a secret operation to account holders in the US -and it is dated July 1941, five months before the US even came into the war."

The documents, some of them obtained by US and British intelligence officials in 1945, and some part of the vast cache of Nazi and Ger-man military records which were microfilmed by the cord the enthusiastic co-oper ation of British and American intelligence teams in gather-ing the information. "By 1945, there is no doubt that the US and British gov-ernments had a very clear picture of the real co-opera-tion of the Swiss and Swedes with the Nazis, and knew also how much Nazi loot was still in Swiss banks.

What the allies did with that information is the question which disturbs Mr Steinberg, as he looks at US state department documents that department documents that list Nazi gold worth $402 million (at 1945 prices) being shipped to Switzerland.

It all began when the World Jewish Congress concluded that it was being blocked by the Swiss Banking Assocation, which was asked to help these the fate of the New Least trace the fate of the Nazi loot. "At first we thought we had a few hundred documents, then a few thousand, then a bundred thousand, and this treasure just keeps growing, Mr Steinberg said.

Datastream Cowboy fixes Pentagon in his sights

continued from page 1 tried by the Datastream Cow

boy when he was identified and arrested on May 12, 1994. Pentagon computer sleuths believe the British teenager, whose name has not been released, was working with a more experienced mentor. Known only by his Cyber-space name of Kuji, he is suspected of being a foreign inteligence agent.

Whenever the Cowboy was blocked by computer secu-rity, he launched into a brisk e-mail exchange with Kuji, who advised him on possible ways past the controls. The Cowboy's penetration of the research laboratory at Rome air force base, New York state, gave him effective control of the computer system. Once inside, he leapfrogged into more than 150 govern-ment data banks, including Nasa, the Wright-Patterson air force base where most flight testing and warplane development take place, and even South Korea's Atomic Research Institute. The teenager was traced by accident, when Mr Christy heard in an online chat of an English teetager whose nick-name was the Datastream Cowboy.

The Pentagon is to start operating a new e-mail system next month for its civilian contractors, which is meant from unclassified systems.

Boy, 11, guilty of slab killing

Martin Watnwright

N II-year-old boy gaped in disbelief at his mother yesterday as a jury at Leeds crown court found him guilty of killing a pensioner by toppling a con-crete slab 12 storeys on to her The unanimous manslaughter verdict was reached after only 65 minutes by the nine women and three men, who were thanked by the judge for "trying such a difficult case". Sentence was adjourned for three weeks for reports on the boy. who was said by wit-nesses to have roared with laughter after friends told him that someone had been hit. The slab, part of a broken lightning conductor on the roof of Grayson Heights flats in Kirkstall, Leeds, crushed the skull of Edna Condie, aged 74, as she returned from shopping with her daughter.

The boy denied manslaughter. Neither he nor his mother spoke after the verdict was given, following a four-day trial, which hinged on whether such a young de-fendant was sufficiently aware of the wrong he had done to be convicted. The court was told by two

The court was told by two of the boy's teachers that they were not certain he knew the difference between right and wrong, or was able to apply standards he learned about in religious education lessons to his own behaviour. But the jury also beard a statement from the boy in which he said clearly that he knew the dif-ference, and that wrong included going on to the roof of the flats and throwing things

Evidence given on video by two of his friends, aged 10 at the time of the tragedy last August, painted a picture of a deliberate act. One of them, who like the defendant cannot be named for legal reasons, said the boy had led them up to the roof, saying: "Tve got a surprise for you."

He had told his two friends not to look while he lifted the slab on to the parapet, and then said: "You can turn round now." In spite of their warnings not to push the slab, he toppled it from the roof. The boy's friends said that he had laughed, shrugged and said "I'm not bothered" after there was a second to the slaughed.

Picks diple

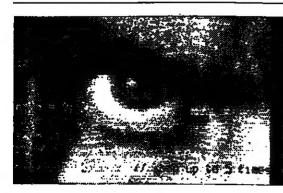

here is now

shen scate

there was a scream from be-low and he was told that the slab had hit a woman. Roger Keen QC, for the boy. did not call any evidence but told the jury that the defendant was not criminally responsible because there was no clear and positive evidence that he knew that what he was doing was ween.

he was doing was wrong.

Mrs Condie was killed instantly, falling in a pool of blood in front of her husband

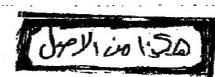

'Who are you?' 'I have no name.' 'What do you want?' 'I want you.' Are you being stalked on the net?

read mother of god by DAVID AMBROSE

Then start worrying...

A WHSMITH THUMPING GOOD READ 1996

'Vermin'

(No good man is a

4th century AD

make England

Swift, Guilliver's Travels, 1726.

for one Mancunian passerby and sartorial standards in the shop window are casual

Are we a nation of louts? Think tank says yes, and others agree

'Clumsy codes of correctness are no replacement for good manners'

Gary Younge

OURTESY costs you nothing. But Britain is paying dearly for its persistent bad manners which are making everyday life "unpredictable, uneasy and unpleasant", according to slovenly and aggressive dress, swearing, cheating sportsmen, parents aping the style and slang of teenagers and a false chumminness from doctors and other professions point to a crisis in manners," said a spokesman for the independent Social Affairs Unit yesterday.

The book, Gentility Recalled: 'Mere' Manners and the Mankind of Social Order, comprises essays by 12

The book claims that. "when it comes to civilizing

by a right-wing think tank. I the young's behaviour to the I its down to their children. "Loutishness on the streets, I elderly or even smokers treat-I "Small wonder that the young ment of non-smokers, artificial and clumsy codes of polit-ical correctness are no replacement for old-fashioned good manners".

"Leather jackets, studded leather boots, pierced noses and aggressive tattoos ... are declarations of war, the war of the sexes, the generations, the classes, the war of all against all," claims Athena S Leoussi, a sociology lecturer at the University of Reading. Predictably, most of the blame lies at the door of the 1960s generation who have are bad-mannered if the old do not act their age," writes Professor Anthony O'Hear of the University of Bradford. And when it is not predicting the society collapsing foul-mouthed tearaways the authors are reminiscing about the good old days. "People of my generation-well remember an age when the terms ladies and gentle men were common usage," writes Rachel Trickett, for-mer principal of St Hughes College, Oxford, Ms Trickett

'Young people feel they have to be more aggressive

Martin Walnwright

than the next guy'

RESIDED over by the benign, sculpted figure of William Cobden, St Ann's Square in Manchester seemed a comprehensive reproof to the Social Affairs Unit yesterday. Britain's favourite word - sorry - was much in evidence as 101 years. "Two words have Mancunians politely skirted got forgotten." he said. "Please and thank you."

But on closer inspection, the wisdom of the unit's advi-sory council proved somewhat less in doubt.

"Yes. I'm afraid they're right, especially about my generation." said John Fitzgerald, aged 23, sporting Geldof stubble and a lanky ponytail. "Young people've got the idea that they'll only get on in life if they're more aggressive women. Rachel McAllister.

than the next guy."

John's father, Roger, agreed with a muffled: "That's right" from behind the flower stall about to eff and blind when he fore. But he added: "I'm which the family has run for saw my skirt and long hair." so sure about the people."

But Mr Anthony said: "In for a seat and don't care about Then 31-year-old David anyone else. Yes, we are get-

Anthony pottered up and used both words several times as he spent his weekly sweeper on the local beat for 25 years, trundled into view with his bandcart, Roger Fitz-gerald said: "I don't know £2.40 on freesias for his mum. Mrs Anthony was not the only Mancunian to benefit yesterday from the "position of being a lady", which the Social Affairs Unit defined as what we're going to do when he retires on Saturday."

Mr Duffy was cheerfully up-beat about 1990s Britons' ways with litter, saying Manspeeding back to the office, said: I just winged a bloke with my carrier and be was probably less fouled and paper-strewn than ever be-fore. But he added: "I'm not

Beef crisis sparks patriotism clash

Stephen Bates in Brussels Patrick Wintour in Rome and Michael White

HE crisis over Britain's banned beef exports last night flared into a party political clash which could turn the coming general elec-tion into a poisonous battle over patriotism unless John Major's government can negotiste the outlines of a beef deal in the next four weeks. As the Prime Minister's new "beef war cabinet" met for the first time and British officials started applying the veto to routine European Union business in Brussels, the Foreign Secretary, Malcolm Rifkind, raised the stakes for both Labour and the Tories by accusing Tony Blair of undermining the Government's efforts to get the worldwide beef ban lifted. Mr Rifkind's attack came after he declared that the Cabinet's policy of non-co-opera-tion was already "concentrating minds wonderfully in Europe in the wake of Mon-day's failure to lift the partial ban on gelatin, tallow and semen — and Mr Blair had for the new British tactics of if British tactics fail to deliver wanting to avoid vetoing a cherished policy will have to negotiations".

Talk of wars on Europe and all the rest is irresponsi-ble and foolish," the Labour leader said after talks with Romano Prodi, the new Italian prime minister. "It is absolutely essential that we do all we can to ensure that the Government strategy works and we get the ban lifted." But Mr Blair's promise not to undermine the national interest while judging the British measures step by step was not enough for Mr Rifkind. "He cannot make up his mind on such a crucial issue. That is pretty pathetic," he told Gordon Brown called the are electioneering instead of "attempting to undo the negotiating disasters and incompetence of Douglas Hogg"—a charge Downing Street denies. Mr Major held back sceptic demands for a tougher line until "let down" by Ger many, Spain and others on Monday's vote, colleagues say, though Mr Hogg's future as agriculture minister is widely held to be limited.

agreement on terms and time-tables for ending the ban by the end of the Florence summit — which starts a month today — the crisis will esca-late out of control as Britain's veto wrecks EU business and her 14 partners dig in.

In reality, the lifting of the ban will be gradual. Mr Rifkind yesterday conceded the non-co-operation policy could last two or three months, or even longer. Privately, some officials admit that, even with good progress, parts of the ban could still be in place on election day.

In Brussels, the veto was deployed yesterday when David Bostock, the UK's deputy ambassador, became the first mandarin to go over the top in the best war when he blocked warmage are director. blocked progress on disaster co-operation at a meeting of the civil protection council.

position over the beef ban and then stopped agreement about co-ordinating national states' responses to international emergencies.

net" for an exemption. There will be a "strong presumption against exemptions," he said. Stephen Wall, the British ambassador to the EU; also did his bit for Britain by telling the European Council that he would not be signing the long-standing insolvency convention, which co-ordinates bankruptcy laws, and that the Government will not approve a convention supporting the setting-up of Europol, the cross-border police intelligence gathering unit.

The Commission and other member states reacted with sang-froid to the British disruption campaign saving it. ruption campaign, saying it would have little effect, and that they were used to Britain acting to block areas of cooperation.

A Commission spokesman said: "We remain serene. At the meeting, Mr Bostock clearly you cannot expect us read a statement on Britain's position over the beef ban and then stopped agreement about working of the institutions. We advocate respect for proceresponses to international dutes because only that way will we be able to produce a solution to the problems. It is used his one-day visit to More ominously, many Rifkind conceded as he and up to each partner to shoulder Rome to offer wary support MPs and officials suspect that nounced that any minister its responsibilities.

Just in tıme

with a mere VGA screen

you buying a notebook without sound

···to Stop you buying a notebook with inferior battery life

...in short, to Stop you buying an over-priced notebook

With a 75, 100 or 133 MHz Pentium® processor, the AST Ascentia J puts power into word processing, spreadsbests and business graphics applications. An advanced orgonomic design featuring a large palm rest, Smartpoint** pointing device and special Windows® 95 keys, provides comfort beyond your wildest dreams. The Ascentia J beasts an extraordinary battery life as well as integrated 16-bit sound and a 10.4" high resolution SVGA colour ASCENTIA J SERIES screen. The Ascentia J also comes with one year of ExeCare - AST's 24 hour repair or replacement service throughout Europe*. Feature for feature, the Ascentia J Series has taken the notebook computer to a higher plateau in personal comfort, ease-of-use and value-for-money.

For details of your nearest stockist call today on 0990 611 611

Prese queted are extregted buy prices, and are for an Ascentia J10 P/75 CSS19 Model 560 (75MHz Pentual® processor, BMB RAM, 500MB hard drive, 255KB eachs and a TUA® SVSA dual-scan STN colour screen). Prices change frequently. All prices and specifications are subject to change without prior nonce or obligation, local intends logo and Pestiusa are

• 75.100 or 133 MHz Pentium

e High resolution 10.4° SVGA

a 3-4 hour Lithium lon bettery

e Imagrated 16-bit sound

• ExeCare 24 hour

colour screen

Britain picks diplomatic bruiser to end deadlock in Cyprus

Diplomatic Editor

. E

Sept. No.

9. . . . .

K. . . . .

RATE .

¢ : • ·

£= .4 . .

SIR DAVID HANNAY, Britain's smoothest diplomatic bruiser, is to become special representative for Cyprus. He will try to break the deadlock between Greeks and Turks — and ensure the Americans don't pull it off and take the credit.

Americans don't pull it off and take the credit.

Fearing a repeat of the way the United States stepped in and settled Bosnia at the Dayton conference, Malcolm Rifkind, the Foreign Secretary, announced yesterday that Sir David, aged 60, was emerging from retirement to help thrash out a deal that communities on the island and through the large Cypriot community in the UK." Mr solved. They're solved by persaverance, not by some magic negotiating fix."

Britain and its European Union partners want to use the talks on Cyprus's accession to the EU as a stimulus for a deal. The talks are due to has eluded mediators since 1974.

"We have links with both communities on the island and through the large Cypriot ternational problems get and through the large Cypriot ternational problems get along the large cypriot ternation the large cypriot ternation the large cypriot ternation the large cypriot ternation that the large cypriot ternation the large cypriot ternation that the large cy war between the two Nato members.

"The British don't want to leave the Americans with a completely free hand," said one diplomat. "They need to make sure they're on the scene."

There is nothing megalomaniac about Oldenburg. He's just a splendidly talented male artist with an outsize sense of often scatological humour. His sketch for a giant pair of binoculars constructed in California becomes a woman's crotch. A ski jump in Oslo is created from frozen sperm. Richard Gott on a pop art revival

Review cover story

Baize Queens

We know this is not life. Life does not have these corners Cut to pockets on the baize.

We take it oh so seriously though. We fight to put the black

This is not life

But it's as near as dammit When the green's running smooth. As silk and you're thirty points ahead.

This is not big money, no. Not for women anyhow. But still we do it all for love

Or so they like to tell us. This is our battleground. Like Amazons

We'd cut our tits off just We bitch in bathrooms At the interval

And have our fill Of men who pat our heads And pat our hums

And show us how to screw Or hold the cue And ram it up their arses

If we're lucky. Still, it's just a game Always shake her hand

And never cheat. Well played. That last black really wiped its feet. Give me a broom

I'll clear the bloody table. This may not be life But it's as near as dammit,

- JANE HOLLAND

Snooker's loss is poetic gain

Dan Glaister on a woman who has won a £4,000 literary prize two years after hanging up her cue

in philosophy, Albert Camus was a goalie and Jane Holland used to play professional snooker Jane Holland? The 29-yearold poet has put her days at the table behind her and yes-terday followed in the foot-

Seamus Heaney when she won the £4,000 Eric Gregory Award for poets under 30. Heaney won the prize in 1966.

Holland, who was ranked 24th among women in world snooker before abandoning it in 1994 to concentrate on poetry, said the game had taught her "self-discipline, persever-ance and patience", qualities

She now devotes the time to writing. "You can't sit around waiting for the muse to de-scend," she said.

"From when I get up to when I go to bed I'm usually writing and reading." Holland started to play snooker in 1989 after her hus-band introduced her to pool. She entered the world championship in the same year, losing in the first round, but she now applied to ber poetry.

"I used to practise eight stand the competition," she hours a day," she said "We got divorced." She turned to poetry, and is happy to be free of the competitive stress of the profes-

"I read a lot of other poets, which is probably my way of being competitive. I like the fact that poetry and snooker signal spooker world.

"I like the dichotomy between my previous and pres-Her first collection, provi-sionally titled The Brief Hiswon the Betty Trask Award, worth £8,000, for his novel

The Debt To Pleasure The award, established when the late novelist left £400,000 for novels of a 'romantic or traditional, rather than experimental, nature", has attracted controversy for the explicit nature of some of the books submitted. Graham Lord, a writer and member of the judging panel,

"My husband couldn't an is to be published by Bloo decrying the "sleazy, foul-tand the competition," she daxe Press mouthed and violent" nature of many of the entries.

Mr Lanchester, whose book was praised as "a sentimental and gastronomic journey through France", dismissed the outcry.

been written at any time in the last 150 years just by sub-stituting the names," he said. The award stipulates that the prize money should be used for travel or research. "That's very welcome," said Mr Lanchester, "otherwise

NUT seeks boycott of test results

ILLIAN Shephard, the Education Secretary, was under increasing pressure last night to abandon plans to publish the first primary school league tables based on the performance of 11-year-olds in tests which have encountered serious teething

Doug McAvoy, general sec-retary of the National Union of Teachers, urged school gov-ernors to mount a campaign of civil disobedience by refusing to hand over test results which the Government could use unfairly to besmirch their school's reputation.

The National Governors Council said it was trying to persuade Mrs Shephard to withdraw her proposals with-out the need for confrontation, although some of its leading members think she would be unable to mount legal action if they went ahead with a boycott.

Mr McAvoy said: "If significant numbers of governing bodies decided not to return results ... ministers would find it embarrassing to take action against the very people they are asking to make the education system work. Any huffing and puffing about the law would be fairly empty."

More than half a million children sat the tests in English, maths and science last week. School governors at 14,000 primary and middle schools in England have a legal responsibility to send the results to the Department for Education and Employment in July and the performance tables are due for publication in February. Ministers in Wales decided not to join the experiment. Mr McAvoy wrote to governors asking them to challenge why Mrs Shephard changed her mind on league tables. On January 25 she said they would not be published until the tests were "fully bedded in", but on February 9 she had "every confidence the 1996 results will provide a

"There was no fresh evi-dence for her to change her mind, so the reason must have been political pressure from rightwing MPs... "If Mrs Shephard refuses to change her mind, she is no better than the Germans and the Austrians and the others who without good reason are refusing to lift the ban on our beef. They are not doing that on the basis of any evidence, but for political reasons. It seems to me that there are good parallels between the man of the National Governors Council, said: "We are not raring to go for any sort of ing this is a matter that is best resolved by the Secretary of State changing her mind." Mrs Shephard said there was a legal obligation on vide the results. "I am surprised that anyone should object to the publication. welcome the responsible atti-tude shown by governors. I feel sure that on reflection the profession will wish to support governing bodies.

ward publication was based on evidence from Chris Woodhead, the chief inspector, in his annual report on February 5 that the performance of children aged seven to 11 was dipping. This confirmed results of last year's tests which showed that only about

Parents told to escort truants

Education Correspondent

AGISTRATES sig-nalled a tougher pol-icy against parents play truant in two cases to escort their teenage sons to school as a condition of bail, to the delight of Lewisham education authority in Lon-don which brought the cases and is calling for a change in the law to reinforce its campaign against truancy.

For two months Simone Westlake has been escorting her son Alan, aged 13, to school as a result of an innovative use of bail conditions by Greenwich magistrates. Yesterday instead of fining her as council officials expected, Eleri Rees, the magistrate, deferred sentence and extended the escort order for three months. "The court needs to see if you can get into the habit of school attendance," she said after hearing Alan's record had improved to 100 per cent. Mrs Rees then imposed an escort order on Linda Johnson, whose son Noel, aged 15, missed 88 days' schooling in the current academic year. Last year Mrs Johnson was fined for failing to ensure he attended school.

Gavin Moore, chairman of ewisham's education committee, said the case demon-strated how effective an es-cort order could be. "It is ludicrous that magistrates have to resort to a legal ployment sleight of hand using the bail yesterday.

Warning signs

F YOUR child . . .

☐ Mixes with friends who are known truants, are older or have left school ☐ Attempts to keep you away from sports matches or parents' evenings □ Never brings home school reports □ Rushes to the letterbox in the morning, to head off warnings from school ☐ Has constant minor

☐ Is specially interested in what times you will be home during the day

laws to make such orders, rather than the Education Act which only allows them to fine a parent. What councils need from the courts is practical help and support to get truants back to school

The authority has 15 education officers who chase up persistent truents and send letters to every parent at the start of each school year spell-ing out their legal obligations. Last year's tables for England showed that nine out of 10 absences were with per-mission. But it is believed that some schools massage their figures.

 New awards in literacy, numeracy and information technology would help to mo-tivate pupils who have not reached GCSE standard and provide job skills. James Paice, the Education and Employment Minister, said

REQUIRED

AC CENT 190

Sections.

CHICOEDER MIN MOOTEN

Pons Deal

Schizophrenic wins prize for harrowing inside story

Sarah Boseley on a writer who both gave and received psychiatric care

An, whose account of life in a mental hospital was described by the novelist Fay Weldon as "unputdownable", has won the Book of the Year award run by the mental health charity Mind.

Linda Hart, now on home leave from hospital in Leicestershire, was presented with a cheque for £1,000 by the health minister. John Bowis. Her book, Phone At Nine Just To Say You're Alive, written in diary form, was begun, she said, "as a survival technique" when she was on a locked ward after a suicide attempt.

Ms Weldon who, with the poet Blake Morrison and the writer Michele Roberts, chose Ms Hart from a shortlist of five, called it "an extraordinary book ... without bitterness and without reproach." There were 90 entries for the literary prize

Before her breakdown, Ms Hart had been part of a men-tal health team in the hospital ward where she was later admitted as a patient. She found the change from staff to patient "quite traumatic". "If it community.

them tomorrow," she said.
"Also, they felt threatened that I might be judgmental of their skills." She was admitted to the psychiatric ward of a Leiceser hospital in September 1993 after an acute schizophrenic episode. She constantly heard er dead father's voice in her head, urging her to kill her-self and join him. One November night in the ward "my mind escaped my control", she said. She hanged herself with her dressing gown cord.

Guardian award

DAVID Brindle, the Guardian's social services correspondent, was named Journalist of the Year by Mind yesterday. The judges said he had been chosen for "the breadth of his general coverage", the number of articles displaying his understanding of mental health issues, and the objectivity of his coverWhen she regained conscious ness, she was in intensive

The book, published by her son, Jack Tilbury, who set up a company for the purpose, tells the story of her yearning and her efforts to get out of hospital. Finally, she made it. The last diary entry is for Monday, July 25: "And today I went back to work."

Mr Tilbury, aged 27, has just signed a national distri-bution deal for the book and says mainstream publishers are not interested. "I think it's a brilliant book. It's not just because she's my Mum," he said. "It really gave us an understanding of what she had been through. It brought a lot of people a lot closer."
Although she lives at home, retired now from her mental health work, Ms Hart is still the subject of an order under section 3 of the Mental Health Act. It means she cannot vote, and could be taken to hospital and given drugs at any time without her consent. Mind's legal officers believe it may be unlawful and intend to op-

Phone At Nine Just To Say You're Alive, Douglas Elliot Press, £7.99, is available from bookshops or Mind; 15-19 Broadway, London E15 4BQ.

Extracts

In the following extracts from her book, Linda Hart tells of her first attack of acute schizophrenia, and then of her perceptions of the locked ward where she was placed after a suicide attempt in hospital.

THAT Wednesday evening...I found it difficult to get to sleep but finally dropped off at around midnight. I awoke at 3am. Wide awake. It was still dark so I went down to the kitchen to make some

As I sat at the kitchen table, drinking tea, I kept my eyes on the floor. There were spiders, cockroaches and vermin. I would suddenly catch sight of a tail, a black body, a leg, out of the corner of my eye. My stomach was filled with maggots; I was rotting. I could hear my father's voice telling me to drink bleach or use a Stanley knife to cut open my belly to let the maggots out. I sat at the table with my feet on the chair opposite. I could smell the maggots and my decomposing flesh; I could see the infested floor from Ward 20 cuts at angle through my cool defences.

There is wallpaper radio,

Linda Hart began writing 'as a survival technique' while and I could bear my father's { It was a long time 'til dawn. Brendon Ward, Castle Asylum. Monday 15 November 1993.

The feeling of rejection from Ward 20 cuts at angles too quiet to hear and too loud to ignore. I dare not dwell on the absoluteness of being locked in, in case the panic which flutters around my heart and legs should rise and form a cream, from which there is no rescue

Our best offer yet. Best call now.

● INTEL® 133MHz PENTIUM® PROCESSOR ● INTEL 430VX PCIser

• 16Mb HIGH PERFORMANCE SDRAM

• 256 Kb PIPELINE BURST CACHE • 166 HARD DRIVE

● 15" SVGA MONITOR (13.75" VIEWABLE AREA)

STB POWERGRAPH 64-BIT PCI GRAPHICS CARD WITH

• 3PCL 2 ISA AND 1 PCL/ISA SHARED EXPANSION SLOTS

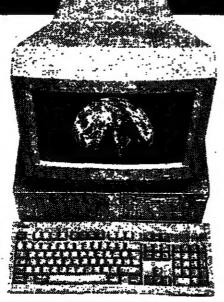

MID-STZED DESKTOP CHASSIS

EIGHT-SPEED CD-ROM DRIVE

 INTEGRATED 16-BIT SOUND (SPEAKERS OPTIONAL) MICROSOFT® OFFICE PROFESSIONAL 95

MICROSOFT WINDOWS 95

£1,299 (£1,555.70 incl. delivery + VAT

At Dell we've always believed in equipping you with leading edge technology at the keenest prices. But our new Ready-to-Run XPS P133s offers our best value yet for just £1,299 (£1,555.70 incl. delivery & VAT), it incorporates the Intel 430VX PCIset and matches a fast 133MHz processor with 16Mb of the latest high performance, high speed SDRAM. What's more, this powerful new technology comes with a powerful specification: a 1Gb

Hard Drive, Eight Speed CD-ROM and Microsoft Office Professional 95

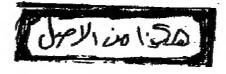

are just some of the features included. But its practically limitless potential is only available for a limited period. So act now and call the world's largest direct

PC manufacturer on 01344 724601.

man, the man is a superior of the superior of

Deal on Europol set to be first real casualty of action • Court ruling against ministry delights convicted fraudster

First beef war shots leave EU unmoved

John Palmer reports on how the British battle strategy is likely to affect Brussels into Britain's European Union "non cooperation" offensive and there was little discernible concern yesterday in Brussels or other "enemy" EU capitals.

The commission, the Euro-pean Parliament and the paign yesterday in Brussels. Three agreements covering British response will be at this different areas of improved point if the beef ban is eased. EU co-operation in tackling Will they call off this peculiar natural disasters and serious campaign to jam up the works, accidents were blocked. Earlier Britain refused to put its there be no change?" one comsignature on measures relat-ing to company insolvency.

Measures to improve the single market are likely to fall foul of the campaign next week. The first veto of any real consequence will probably arise early next month when the Home Secretary, Michael Howard, and other EU justice ministers meet in Luxembourg to agree arrangements for the operation of Europol, the EU police intelligence agency. Britain has been holding up a protocol because of its oppo-

ats toldi

rt truants

a protocol because of its opposition to the European Court of Justice playing a role in regulating disputes between mem-ber states about Europol itself. Until Mr Major's beef an-nouncement British diplomats had been working to find a compromise which might give. Britain an opt-out. Without progress on beaf it seems certain that Europol — which most countries want eventumost countries want eventu-ally to become a European FBI — will remain blocked.

However, EU farm ministers will be meeting at the same time and in the same building as the justice ministers. Almost everyone in Brussels is convinced that the ban on most if not all of the beef derivatives - gelatin, tallow, and semen - will be lifted. Even if pean Parliament and the other EU governments shrugged off talk in London that Britain could bring the work of the EU to a halt.

British diplomats struck the first blows in the Governments opposed to it.

"The question is, what the mission official asked. Although the Chancellor, Kenneth Clarke, will meet fellow EU finance ministers early in June, no decisions are expected which could delay preparations for the single currency. Monetary union will also be reviewed by Mr Major and other EU heads of government in Florence on June 14, but again no firm decisions are expected which Mr Major could derail. The EU leaders are not expected to give their backing to the final shape of the planned transition to a single cur-rency, including arrange-ments linking currencies in-side and outside the 'euro' bloc before the Dublin summit in December.

"By then the problem of the British BSE disease will have been sorted out, or the British Conservatives will no longer be in government — or both," one senior EU diplomat

John Major and Malcolm Rifkind after a meeting yesterday of the beef 'war cabinet'. Mr Rifkind said Britain's obstructive action was 'already biting'

Patriotic Blair avoids loose talk abroad

Patrick Wintour reports on the Labour leader's careful stance during Rome visit | vating left-of-centre ideology of the PDS, the former leader's careful stance during Rome visit | vating left-of-centre ideology of the PDS, the former leader by the PDS, the former leader by the PDS, the former leading by the PDS is the leading by the PDS.

INTEREST FREE OPTION

There's a great deal going on

Tony Blair's visit to the new European presidency in Rome yesterday did not bring an end to

With Britain's crack diplomatic corps already massing in Brussels, the Labour leader vas determined not to expose himself to the charge of being a British Quisling. He knew that to criticise John Major's plan to paralyse the European Union — whilst abroad — the enemy.

Loose talk would cost cattle. Any hint that morale on the British home front might be flaky, or the political classes divided, would only bring solace to Chancellor Helmut Kohl

So as Mr Blair flew over

RITISH beef could not | national interest is now en-be saved in a day and | gaged and I am certainly not coming here to undermine

> Treading a careful line in his talks with the Italian prime minister, Romano Prodi, Mr Blair told him the scientific evidence pointed to the safety of British beef. He also told reporters that talk of war in Europe is fooi-ish and deeply unhelpful but if non co-operation is, as Kenneth Clarke described it. tabloids be equivalent to handing over D-Day plans to the enemy. a way of breaking an impasse

However, the issue of bo-vini Inglesi was not the only cause that had led Mr Blair to take the road to Rome. The new centre-left government is interested in the poli-tics of new Labour and the man described by the Italian press as Il Buono, Il Signor Simpatico, and the man reno-professor, who was busy yesterday doing what Italian prime ministers always do.

seeking a vote of confidence in the Italian parliament. Italy is now the only major European country with a cen-tre-left government after the

in the history of the 60-yearold republic.
The Italian press is fascinated by Mr Blair. According to Corriere della Sera, he by Mr Blair and its headquar-ters was the Labour leader's wears classic clothes with first port of call yesterday gold buttons in the manner of Prince Charles, His friend is where he met the party leader, Massimo D'Alema. Downstairs in the PDS headquarters, the signs of the party's communist heritage In one corner stands a bust of Autonio Gramsci, a sign oubblico.

Mr D'Alema centred on Mr Blair's appeal to the middle class and the need to rein back a burgeoning welfare state, with Mr Prodi promising controls on welfare spending to prepare the Italian economy for entry into the Mr Blair with the leader of Italy's former communists.

pagne socialist. Mr Blair also relies upon spin doctors — the cinici manipolatori del

The PDS is also fascinated

Sheep export plea upheld

HE European Court animal export firm whose former director is a convicted fraudster can claim compensation against the

Thomas Lomas's company Hedley Thomas (Ireland) Ltd. which now employs him as a consultant, was refused li-cences to export sheep to Spain by the Ministry of Agriculture which thought the animals might be cruelly treated. The court ruled that the ministry's suspicions were not sufficient to refuse a licence and the decision. sion was a restraint of trade. ston was a restraint of trade.

Its judgment said: "Member states must rely on trust in each other to carry out inspections on their respective

Mr Lomas's company is to apply to the High Court in London for £1 million compensation. In January 1993 Mr Lomas was convicted at Maidstone crown court of double claiming for sheep ex-ports and defrauding the Min-istry of Agriculture of £100,000 while running a company as an undischarged bankrupt. He was given an 18-month jall sentence.

The European Court decided the criminal charges were irrelevant to the restraint of trade case and the ministry was unable to raise the matter. Mr Lomas, who now lives in France, said yes-terday he was "delighted" with the outcome.

British officials had intervened to prevent Mr Lomas exporting sheep to Spain in October 1992 on the grounds that the slaughterhouses to which they were consigned were not up to British stan-dards. Officials believed sheep were not being stunned deting back from the Paris commune of 1871, and a hammer and sickle in front of which an embarrassed Mr Blair was photographed.

The European Court ruled that the ministry was not able to make that judgment because the slaughterhouses But upstairs the talk with had been licensed by the Spanish authorities.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Agriculture said it was aware of the background facts but was unable to bring them to the attention of the European Court. "Our lawyers are obviously considering what European single currency in will happen now with the

Odd man out . . . Bill Clinton, above, is a mediocre golfer compared with (left to right) Kennedy (pictured with his father Joseph), Eisenhower (who played 800 rounds when president) and Roosevelt

Revealed: the inner secrets of swinging US masters

lan Katz in New York

ASHINGTON dinner tables are buzzing with news of a politi-cal tell-all due to be pub-lished next month. It will reportedly reveal that John Kennedy did it surrepti-tiously but rather well, that Richard Nixon did it obses-sively, and that Jimmy Car-ter did not do it at all ter did not do it at all.

For once Bill Clinton's aides have little to fear. Their man is exposed only as unorthodox and pain-fully slow. "He comes up on his toes and lets his right elbow fly," says Peter Landau, co-author of Presiden-tial Lies: The Illustrated History of White House Golf. "He can take five hours or more for a round." Ever since the 27th president, William Taft, strug-gled to swing a club around his 25-stone girth at the be-has been the unnofficial presidential sport, as much a part of the White House job as welcoming foreign dignitaries or throwing out the first pitch.

In their ambitious study, Mr Landau and co-author Shepherd Campbell rank America's First Golfers based on film footage, scores and anecdotal reports.

Kennedy, who roundly condemned his predecessor, Dwight Eisenhower, for his time-consuming enthuslasm for the game, emerges as the finest presi-dential golfer of the cen-tury, lauded for "a grace-ful, rhythmic swing" and "accuracy with his shorter irons".

Gerald Ford, who earned a reputation during his otherwise undistinguished presidency for injuring innocent bystanders with un-nerving regularity, comes famously squeezed in 800 rounds during his two zed in 800 | did not swing a club in White House terms.

In another surprise, Franklin Roosevelt, usually remembered as a wheelchair-bound polio victim, is rated the fourth he suggests.

Kennedy emerges as the finest presidential golfer of the century best White House golfer for his performances while serving in the Wilson administration. Both Ronald Reagan and George Bush sneak in ahead of the "enthusiastic" Mr Clinton.

Mr Landau describes golf as "an 18-hole safety valve for the toughest job in the world". Only three presi-dents this century — Hoo-measure of a White House incumbent need look no further than his performance on the golf course,

Nixon, for instance, wa dogged by a claim in the autobiography of golfer Sam Snead, that he once threw a ball out of a wooded thicket without taking an extra stroke. According to Mr Landau Lyndon Johnson took so called mulligans, or free shots, "as though they were part of the game," while JFK pointed out hazards to his opponents as a not entirely charitable courtesy.

The verdict on Mr Clinton is mixed. On the one hand he is praised as an affable golfing companion with a powerful swing. On the other he is chided for "liberal use of mulligans" and "scruffy golf attire when out of public view".

Yeltsin to meet rebel warlord

POSSIBLE breakthrough in the bloody impasse in Che-chenia moved nearer last night when the Organisa-tion for Security and Co-operation in Europe announced that it had arranged a meet-ing between the Chechen rebel leader. Zelimkhan Yandarbiyev, and President Boris Tim Guldimann, head of the OSCE delegation in Grozny, said Mr Yandarbiyev had agreed to meet the Russian leader in Moscow.

"A meeting will take place in the very near future," Mr Guldimann said. "The OSCE will accompany Yandarbiyev to Moscow and will take part in part of the talks."

Mr Guldimann said the meeting would take place before the first round of Russia's presidential election on June 16.

Later, Mr Yeltsin's press secretary, Sergei Medvedev, confirmed that the president was ready to meet the rebel leader. "The president will guarantee the safety of Mr Yandarbiyev and the mem-bers of his delegation," Mr

Mr Yeltsin is desperate to stop the war in Chechenia before the presidential election. But hopes for a deal have to be set against the battle now raging between federal troops and rebels around the Che-chen village of Bamut, which has led to some of the fiercest fighting and highest casual-ties of the war this year. Although the army said yesterday that it had retaken part of Bamut, witnesses said Russian tanks were still atcomplete control.

The Chechens claimed they had received reinforcements and fresh supplies, and were inflicting big losses on Russian forces. By their own admis-sion, the Russians have lost almost 60 troops this week.

Many generals felt after last year's brief ceasefire that they had been held back from making military advances just when the separatists were about to collapse, and will not want the same to happen again. The Yeltsin administration also has to account for the implacable opposition to any deal with the rebels of its puppet government in Grozny, led by Doku Zavgayev, the former chief of the Chechen communists. Mr Zavgayev said yes-terday that any ruling coali-tion involving the separatists was out of the question.

Even if the talks do take place, the minimum Russia will demand — a formal acknowledgement of its sover-eignity over the territory, and control of the oil pipelines through Chechenia — may still be too much for the sepa ratists to accept.

It is also unclear whether

Mr Yandarbiyev has authority over hardline rebel military commanders

Until yesterday, it was thought that any contacts be-tween Mr Yeltsin and the rebels would take place in Chechenia, during a trip to Grozny which the president had said he was determined to make, against the advice of his security chiefs. Reports of possible alternative sites then began to circulate.

Last week, the OSCE was asked by Russia's prime min-ister, Viktor Chernomyrdin. tacking, and the military con- to contact the separatists.

Top businessman held by police

James Meek on moves to distance the president from tainted associates in Russian business

Russian financial scandals of the past two years has highlighted the relationship between President Bo-ris Yeltsin's administration and the country's murky, violent, business world. only three weeks before the first round of the presidential election.

Observers have speculated that the arrest of Boris Fyodorov, head of the National Sports Founda-tion and chairman of the National Credit bank, may mark the beginning of an attempt by the president to purge his entourage of tainted names.

In the past two days Mr Yeltsin has sacked the head of Russia's health and sani-tation committee, accusing him of breaching laws and misusing federal funds, and ordered the prime minister, Viktor Chernomyrdin, to dismiss the president of the social welfare fund for similar reasons. But if these moves taken together signify a presiden-tial clean-up attempt, there is still mystery over why Mr Fyodorov has been picked off, when more notorious figures closer to Mr Yeltsin could have been dismissed to appease the

The businessman, who Islamic group Hamas, has called on his followers to suspend attacks against Israel until peace talks between Israel and the PLO end, a Hamas official said. — Reuter.

> Buy this notebook and get an HP DeskJel 340 for tained by police who allegedly found 4.5 grams of cocaine in his car.

It is unclear what he will be charged with, but the possession of a small amount of narcotics is an unlikely reason to detain such an influential figure. when two other men in the

The National Sports nessman linked to Foundation which Mr Fyosome of the biggest dorov headed is responsible for raising money for range of sports events and teams, including the Russian squad for the forth-coming Atlanta Olympics.

Until last year, the foundation's main source of income, courtesy of a Kremlin decree, was a gigantic commercial operation importing duty free alcohol and cigarettes. Details of its income and expenditure lic, but up to £50 million was deposited in the National Credit bank before it collapsed last year. In an apparently casual deal with the bank's boss. Oleg Boiko, Mr Fyodorov became its chairman.

However, the public associates the duty-free scheme not with Mr Fyodorov but with his mentor and predecessor, Mr Yeltsin's close friend and tennis coach Shamil Tarpishchev, now the sports minister. Likewise National Credit is associated more with Mr Boiko, who was in charge of the bank when it collapsed and is still its nomi-nal chief executive. Until recently Mr Boiko was one of the inner circle of pro-

Yeltsin businessmen.

Another glimpse into the Dostoyevskian world of Russia's ruling elite came yesterday with the discovery of the body of a deputy justice minister, Anatoly Stepanov, in his Moscow apartment. The lawyer, and 55 had beed wounder. aged 55, had head wounds,

spark protests

Paul Webster in Paris

■RADE UNIONS demonstrated throughout France in favour of a 35hour week yesterday as speculation continued on a government reshuffle.

The marches, the first significant joint action since last autumn's public sector casts that up to 25,000 civil service jobs will go in economy measures needed to join a single European currency.

Most of the big unions were involved in the marches during which the prime minister, Alain Juppe, was attacked for accusing the public sector of carrying too much "bad fat". Unions took this as a provoca-tion, recalling his tactless remarks last year when he justified a civil servants' pay freeze by saying they were lucky to have jobs when 3 million people were out of work. Yesterday's protesters in-cluded teachers who are expected to suffer from pro-There were also rail and public transport stoppages which affected the Eurostar service. Nurses in Paris held their

Mr Juppe has said that economies, estimated at £7 billion to £8 billion, will have to be made. The biggest cut, nearly 20 per cent, will | not be changed.

hit the cultural ministry, whose spending will decrease by nearly £500 million next year. During his presidential campaign a year ago, Jacques Chirac promised to increase the cultural budget.

The new outcry by unions, which believe the government is deliberately putting a brake on moves towards a 35 hour week to please employ ers, has increased the likelihood of the third cabinet reshuffle since Mr Juppé's appointment a year ago.

Worried by a potential split been negotiating with politi-cal leaders who supported the Gaullist former prime minis-ter, Edouard Balladur, in the presidential election a year ago. François Léotard, former defence minister and recently-elected president of the junior coalition partner, the UDF, has spoken strongly in support of Mr Juppe's criticism of the civil service and is expected to be offered a senior

Mr Juppé will lunch with Mr Balladur today to discuss the future of Charles Pasqua, the Gaullist former interior minister, who many MPs feel should be brought back into the cabinet to sort out increasing tension in Corsica. But Mr Pasqua said the present government was doing a satisfactory job and should

Juppé's taunts Rifkind pleads Palestinian case

lan Black Diplomatic Editor

RITAIN is urging Israel to keep open the option of a Palestinian state, end its occupation of East Jerusalem and ease harsh restrictions on self-rule areas days before the country's crucial general election. In a wide-ranging speech on the Middle East peace pro-cess. Malcolm Rifkind, the Foreign Secretary, last night insisted that Israel withdraw from south Lebanon and the Golan Heights once its secu-rity is guaranteed.

But it was on the Palestin-But it was on the Palestin-thest: "To last, the settlement will need to respect basic Palestinian rights, not least the right to self-determination." Mr Rifkind said. "To close off the option of a state would in my view be a mistake of the first magnitude."

Even Israel's Labour prime minister, Shimon Peres, has shied away from committing himself to a Palestinian state, and the Likud opposition is against if.

Foreign Office officials said last night's speech, to the charity Medical Aid for Palescomments on Jerusalem provoked an angry response om the Israeli embassy. "I hope nothing will be done

... to prejudice the final outcome of the talks," the Foreign Secretary said. "Until the talks are over, Britain's position, like that of the international community generally, remains that Israel is in military occupation of East Jerusalem and has only de facto authority over West Jerusalem."

Both main Israeli political side for their capital.

Mr Rifkind claimed a special role for Britain, based on its historical involvement in the Palestine problem and its even-handedness, compared with the United States traditionally closer to Israel, and France, which recently embarked on a high-profile pro-Arab policy. He praised the Palestinian leader, Yasser Arafat — due to visit London in June — and urged him to build "a true democracy". He condemned parties insist that Jerusalem, whose eastern half was annowed in 1967, will remain the country's undivided capital. Palestinians want the eastern prevent terrorism".

News in brief

French centre in Bangui ablaze

tervention in the Central African Republic sacked and set fire to the French cultural centre in the capital Bangui yesterday, witnesses said.

They said the attack oc-curred after French troops fired in the air to disperse several thousand demonstrators marching on the French embassy in the city

PROTESTERS denouncing french military intered Ukrainian planes to back up its troops defending President Ange-Félix Patasse. He is resisting a six-day-old mutiny by soldiers demanding his removal from office. The French foreign ministry said Ambassador Jean-Paul Angelier was carrying out his duties

People in Bangui had said rentre.

French officials said
France had flown armoured vehicles and other dence in Bangui. — Renter.

Chinese arms ring broken

Federal agents have broken up a Chinese arms smuggling ring involving two state-con-trolled Chinese munitions firms, in one of the biggest seizures of illegal automatic weapons in American his-tory, US officials said.

An official said arrest war rants went out on Wednesday for eight people, Americans and Chinese, in the San Francisco area. — Reuter.

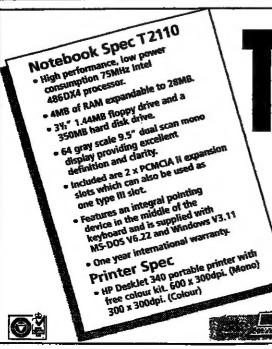

General jailed The Spanish high court yes-terday ordered the paramili-gal detention, torture and the killing of two presumed Eta members, José Antonio Lasa and José Ignacio Zabala.— Hamas appeal

tary civil guard general, Enri-que Rodríguez Galindo, to be detained unconditionally in connection with a "dirty war" against Basque rebels in the

Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, the jailed founder of the militant

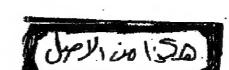

(Inc. VAT £997)

Mon.-Sun. 9am-6pm.

Voted No.1 direct supplier with the highest quality in the latest Computer Weekly survey by Kew Associates. Action Computer Supplies, Alperton House, Bridgewater Road, Wembley, Middlesex HAO 1EH, beducing the se Tay would re TEY of a the Arrest warrants for two top Bosnian officials accused of genocide could be issued in July, the head of the UN war crimes tribunal says

Drive against Serb leaders heats up

RREST warrants for the Bosnian Serb leader, Radovan Karadzic, and his military chief. Ratko Miadic, could be issued in July the president of the in July, the president of the United Nations war crimes tribunal covering former Yu-goslavia was quoted as saying yesterday.

According to a statement by the German foreign ministry.
Judge Antonio Cassese told Klaus Kinkel, the German foreign minister, at a meeting in Bonn that the tribunal would hear evidence against the two indicted war crimes suspects in The Hague on June 27.

"Afterwards the matter of issuing an international arrest warrant would have to be decided," the statement added. "President Cassese explained it was probable that the international arrest warrant against Karadzic and Mladic would be issued on

The June 27 hearing is part of a mechanism that lets prosagainst those charged as war criminals but not arrested, with a view to obtaining a confirmation of the indictment and an international ar-rest warrant

Such so-called "Rule 61" hearings do not amount to a trial in the absence of the accused. That is not allowed called for warrants to be issued against the two men, saying the peace process in former Yugoslavia cannot describe the clections are to be succeed unless they are brought to justice.

Mr Karadzic and Gen Min-Mr Karadzic and Gen Mla-dic have been indicted twice in their absence by the tribu-nal. They are accused of being responsible for genocide and crimes against humanity in connection with the siege of Sarajevo and the fall last year of the UN "safe area" of Srebrenica in eastern Bosnia. In Sarajevo westerday, John

In Sarajevo yesterday, John Kornblum, the United States assistant secretary of state who is trying to shore up the peace settlement in former Yugoslavia, said he had discussed the future of the two cussed the future of the two men at a four-hour meeting in Belgrade the previous day with the Serbian president, Slobodan Milosevic.

Mr Kornblum said he had told Mr Milosevic, patron of the Bosnian Serbs, that Wash-ington expected both men to be removed from power and handed over to The Hague's tribunal.

He also made an unusually of a mechanism that lets pros-ecutors present evidence and fair elections are likely to be held in Bosnia by mid-September, as prescribed in the Dayton peace pact.

Most diplomats have voiced scepticism that such a poll could be held while hardline Bosnian Serbs and Croats still hold sway in their respective areas of the country.

"The Dayton agreement does not say that we have to ... [which] should make it possible for the European Union administrator to announce a date for the elections soon," the mediator, Michael Steiner, said. The elections are due on May 31 but local Muslim leaders had been unhappy that Muslims driven out of Mostar during the war would be unable to vote A Bosnian official who asked not to be named said there had been agreement in Bosnia, diplomats in Sarajevo said yesterday. It was unclear whether the elections would be held on schedule or post-

"As a result of crash diplo-macy, we have an agreement between both sides in Mostar poned slightly.

He said all citizens of Mostar would be able to vote. Arrangements were being worked out to transport refugees back to vote or to enable them to vote in the countries

"The elections are to be held, if you look very carement, when the conditions for the holding of free and fair elections have been achieved. And I think there is every prospect those conditions will have been achieved."

Mediators have struck a deal to head off a Muslim boycott that threatened elections in the troubled Muslim-Croat city of Mostar in southern Respire diplomats in Sergieve

Getting ready for normality . . . French peacekeeping troops remove sand bag protection at Sarajevo airport. The Dayton peace accord has allowed the Mr Kinkel has already have a perfectly functioning where they had taken shelter. authorities to begin preparations for a resumption of commercial flights into the battered city after 43 months of war

FROM ONLY

UP TO 120 MINUTES

At Comet right now if you connect to Talk 60 before June 2nd 1996, your inclusive

talktime will instantly double.

orange

MOTOROLA

memories

previously £99.99

was £49.99

Up to 60 minutes talktime

Backlit display and keypad

11 hours standby time

180 name and number

y police

177

5 8 8 8 8°

 $\| \hat{\chi}_{i}(t) \hat{\chi}_{i}(t) \|_{L^{2}(\mathbb{R}^{N})} \leq \varepsilon$

1.00 march 2.00

page/10 %

355.20 Phys. 1

A 120 11 TO ge with the 3 3 de 1

.... 11-110 No. 1

244 H man of the

5,476 = 1

Salara error

(1)

المعاد بالمعهود الو

Par stail

Sept 4.

Se a -

- A.

US calls time on defiant Karadzic

Michael Dobbs

explains why the state department is getting impatient, six months after Dayton

N THE first day of the Dayton peace talks, America's secretary of state, Warren Christo-pher, made clear that time was just about up for Rado-

Mr Christopher told they continue to provide reporters that the United sanctuary to indicted war States would not feel "comfortable" sending troops to Bosnia as long as men like later, Mr Karadzic continritory with impunity in a Mercedes, seemingly unconcerned by the presence of 60,000 Nato troops, who are under orders to arrest him if he falls into their hands and hand him to the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague.

Mr Karadzic's unexpected durability has raised concerns in Washington and other capitals about the credibility of planned "free and fair elections", which are scheduled to take place in Bosnia by September 14.

Washington argues that this raises questions about the effectiveness of the US-led peacekeeping mission, and about Western promises to preserve Bosnia as a unified state.

Richard Holbrooke, the for-mer assistant secretary of state and architect of last November's Dayton agreement. "Karadzic is challenging every political provision of Dayton, indiprovision of Dayton, inn-vidually and in totality. If he gets away with it, it will lead to the partition of the country (between the sepa-ratist Serbs and a Muslim-Croat federation)."

US officials say they have begun to examine a list of possible "additional measures" to take against Mr Karadzic, including steps to restrict his freedom of movement. Fearing a repetition of the 1993 fiasco in Somalia when they mounted an unsuccessful manhunt for the warlord, Mohammed Farah Aideed. US military commanders have flatly refused to hunt for Mr Karadzic and other alleged war criminals. The strategy of President | Post.

Clinton's administration until now has been to rely on Slobodan Milosevic, Serbia's president, to orchestrate Mr Karadzic's removal. Washington also wants Mr Milosevic to help remove the Bosnian Serb military leader. General military leader. General Ratko Miadic, who has also been indicted for war crimes.

This week in Belgrade,
John Kornblum, the US special envoy to the former Yugoslavia, has been reminding Mr Milosevic criminals. Mr Kornblum arrived in Belgrade on Wednesday, a Mr Karadzic were still in day after a public appear-"command" positions.

More than six months funeral in Belgrade for another indicted Bosnian nes to drive around his ter- | Serb officer, General

Djordje Djukic. Serbian police made no effort to arrest Gen Mladic, who has been accused of or-dering the massacre of up to 6,000 Muslims from the Bosnian town of Srebrenica in July last year. His pres-ence in Belgrade drew pro-tests from both the US and the international war crimes tribunal.

Bosnia's Muslim-led government has threatened to boycott this summer's elec-tions unless Mr Karadzic is removed from office. Many diplomats doubt the poll can go ahead if he retains his power and influence. "Karadzic should not be in a position to campaign in the elections," said Michael Steiner, a German diplomat responsible for overseeing the implementation of the Dayton accords. "If he is in a position to campaign, we

Underscoring Serb defi-ance, the new Bosnian Serb prime minister, Gojko Klickovic, called on Wednesday for changes in the Day-ton deal, including widening the three-mile wide Posa-vina corridor linking Serb-held parts of eastern and northern Bosnia. While conceding that they have lost a significant battle in their attempt to orchestrate Mr Karadzic's removal, US officials insist they have not lost the war.

"This is coming to a head one way or the other," said a state department official.

"There is a political dynamic taking place here that is not in Karadzic's favour." — Washington

Reducing the body to pure energy would release the energy of a thousand H-bombs. "It is hard to imagine how to do this in an environmentally friendly fashion." Enc Korn on The Physics of Star Trek

Review page 7

ORANGE NOW COVERS 90% OF GREAT BRITAIN

With 90% population coverage of Great Britain, Orange is one of Europe's fastest growing mobile phone networks and offers van Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader and indicted gro will not be eligible for suit every pocket. Contact war criminal.

that Serbia and Montenegrowing mobile phone networks and offer 5 talk plans to suit every pocket. Contact your local Comet store for detaits of the Orange network.

ORANGE OFFERS:

BILLING BY THE SECOND Orange charge calls by the second, therefore you don't pay more than you need to.

INCLUSIVE TALKTIME

All 5 talk plans offer from 15 minutes to 9 hours of talktime, a plan to suit every pocket.

FREE INCLUSIVE SERVICE includes caller ID (not on mr1), call barring, call hold, call waiting and itemised billing.

2 YEAR WARRANTY-FREE INSURANCE 24 HOUR HANDSET REPLACEMENT

ORANGE MOTOROLA mr20 MOBILE

LOWEST PRICE

@@@@

DC C

Up to 60 minutes talktime or up to 12 hours standby time 185 name and number memories Caller ID was £79.99 previously £99.99

MOBILE PHONE Up to 80 minutes talktime or 18 hours

standby time 179 name and number memories Caller ID was £129,99 previously £149.99

and the second of the second s

(4) (5) (6) LEATHER CASE & 7 3 9 IN-CAR POWER CORD WORTH THE COMET PRICE MOTOROLA.

RING FREE ON 0500 560570 FOR YOUR NEAREST STORE

COMET EXCLUSIVE - #£100 IN HOLIDAY

FOR PLAYSTATION Sturning 3D graphics with commentary from

AVAIL ARLE

SEE THE COMET PRICE INDEX ON Teletext Ch.4 P.425

THE COMET PRICE: The stores in South Water do not show savings in-store. All items subject to availability. •Voucher offers end close of business 27 06.96. Vouchers cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer or voucher notes: Voucher offers Process as Reason code A9. • Whate stocks last. Ask in-store for details. •Subject to connection to Orange • On Talk 60 only, by leaflet redemption. Ask in-store for details. •Customers must remain or Talk 60 for a minimum period of 3 months. • Maximum voucher claim is £100 per product. By leaflet redemption, Ask in-store for details. •EVWhite stocks last. Ask in-store for details. Prices and information correct at time of going in press 23,05.98.

Edition Number 46,561 119 Farringdon Road, London EC1R 3ER Fax No. 0171-837 4530 E-mail: letters@guardian.co.uk Website: http://www.guardian.co.uk

A devastating sentence

Mr Howard received no mercy from Lord Taylor

Home Office ministers all urging the Home Secretary in yesterday's debate in the Lords to think again about his maliciously-motivated white paper on sentencing. It was the Lord Chief Justice who dominated the debate, not just because of his title, nor because this was his last speech before he retires. because of cancer, but because of the merciless way he punctured Michael Howard's specious justifications for this latest turn of the prison screw. The Lord Chief Justice noted the Government's "shallow and untested figures", the switches in policy, and the "grave consequences" which this would produce for the criminal justice system. Most damning of all — because he is a judge who weighs his words carefully - was a sentence which legal students will study for decades to come: "Never in the history of our criminal law have such far reaching proposals been put forward on the strength of such flimsy and dubious evidence."

Neither the united opposition of the Conservative legal establishment -Lords Donaldson, Carr, Windlesham, Carlisle, Belstead — nor Lord Taylor's devastating deconstruction will persuade Mr Howard. He is beyond rational persuasion. Politics, not policy, is his prime motive. Remember, it was at last year's Conservative Party conference where the main principles of the white paper were set out tougher sentences, reduced remission and automatic life sentences for second time sex or violent offenders. A Home Secretary who has pushed up the prison population from 40,000 to 55,000 seems intent on doubling the original inmate number through the application of crude, inappropriate and ineffective American sentencing principles. No one should be in any doubt where we are heading.

THE line-up could hardly have been more impressive: senior judges, distinguished lawyers, former Conservative that has the highest number of prisoners. America now has 1.5 million people behind bars — proportionately six times more than our current record. Who would look to America for solutions to our current crime problems? Only a man desperate to justify his own shallow bid for populist support. Ironically, he has not even won that. The Tories still remain behind Labour in public opinion polls on law and order.

We disagree with the Lord Chief Justice on only one point. Mr Howard does have the right to impose a legislative straightjacket on judicial discretion. even though he is not right to do it. Traditionally, sentencing policy was laid down by Parliament and implemented by the judiciary. It was only when Parliament began removing minimum sentences in the nineteenth century that the judiciary moved into the vacuum. The retiring Chief is right to warn that restoring certainty in sentencing through minimum sentences can only be achieved by sacrificing justice. It will, in his words, create 'production line justice" which can take little or no account of the individual circumstances. Yet extenuating (or aggravating) circumstances differ as widely as criminal characters: insults. incitement, genuine grievances. More seriously, the Howard plan will not achieve its aims. It will not cut crime. As the Lord Chief Justice noted, the only result of imposing seven year prison sentences for dealing in hard drugs for a third time will be the incarceration of thousands of addicts who need to deal to pay for their habit. Sentencing policy is too serious to be left to politicians or even to judges. What is needed is a sentencing council, made up of judges, prison governors, criminologists and psychologists — but complaints have trebled in the last decade and whom the House of Lords broadest sense, is a real problem in also debated yesterday, are another. Other frequently cited examples include the spread of litter in the streets and of bad language on stage and screen. To many people, the evidence that Britain has become a ruder, cruder society seems all around them. Most adults are certain that manners and behaviour have got worse in their lifetime. Many young people think their elders are stressed about nothing. Yet a succession of critics including David Selbourne, Gertrude Himmelfarb and Amitai Etzioni continue to warn that without radical changes in moral codes and personal behaviour, civic order all these troubles can be laid at the door will crumble further.

Right-wingers can only scratch the surface of rudeness

Yesterday the right-wing Social Affairs Unit added its own pack of worries to this mounting pile of anxiety. The contributors to Gentility Recalled have targeted a range of real and not-so-real problems: loutishness in the streets, the spread of spitting, "inappropriate" dress such as baseball caps (worn forwards as well as back), disrespectful behaviour towards the elderly, failing to act one's age, and that favourite of English men of a certain background the decline of sportsmanship on the cricket field. It is not an intellectually impressive collection, and as an indictment of contemporary manners it is far inferior, for instance, to Mr Selbourne's | ing the need to build a modern civic The Spirit of the Age.

ROAD rage is merely the latest manifes- | Yet there is no denying that the tation. Noisy neighbours, about whom | Social Affairs Unit is on to some genuine themes. Bad behaviour, in the contemporary society, not a phoney one. There is a need to remoralise the relations not just between generations, genders and within families but especially between strangers. Selfishness, denial of responsibility and aggression are genuine problems of the age. The language and the culture have been debased. Courtesy, deference and consideration for others ought to be valued not derided. Individuals do need to accept more responsibility for their behaviour towards others. The trouble with the Unit's approach is that it is obsessed with proving that of progressive liberalism. Their writers like others down the ages — con-stantly hark back to a supposed golden age of manners and decency which never really existed. These ones try to blame everything on feminism, multiculturalism and the wizened chestnut of political correctness. There is no place in their analysis for the cult of possessive individualism, greed, the Me Generation, dutiless rights, the privatisation of public duty and order - or even for the Murdoch press. The Social Affairs Unit have raised some real questions and provided some entertaining reading, but this old-hat, nostalgic fogeyism is a trivialising way of address-and moral culture in Britain.

The battle of the primates

Lord Runcie's criticisms are honest, timely and to the point

IT IS not good etiquette to criticise your | uality is "ludicrous". A hotch-potch of successor. And Lord Runcie, always the gentleman, has kept an honourably low profile for five years since he stepped down as Archbishop of Canterbury. But | neither intellectual coherence nor pasno serving bishop shows either the perception or the courage to take on the role of loyal opposition. A process anal- honesty about Archbishop Carey's ogous to that of the Labour Party has reforming zeal. The Turnbull Report groomed the episcopal benches into toeing the corporate line. Disagreements are perceived as too damaging to the morale and authority of the Church and debate has been unhealthily stifled. By default, the vital task of timely criticism has fallen to Lord Runcie.

His recent comments cannot be dismissed simply as the gripes of a liberal against an evangelical, for they are bly measured terms. Lord Runcie much too astute and well-informed. prophesies the price of Archbishop Car-Lord Runcie dares to say what is blindingly obvious to virtually everyone believer and non-believer — namely that the Church's policy on homosex- relevance to those outside.

professing one standard for clergy and another for laity which translates into a practice of "don't tell, don't ask"; it has toral compassion.

Equally welcome was Lord Runcie's represents the biggest overhaul of the central institutions of the Church in decades, but it has prompted extraordinarily little debate. Yet it represents the Thatcherisation of the one institution which was beyond her reach, introducing management concepts into a Church informed by a completely different ethic - Christianity. In admiraprophesies the price of Archbishop Carev's success. A better organised Church catering more efficiently for its believers, a holy huddle of little influence or overlooks some critical points. The only justifiable grounds for testing women to identify the so-called cancer gene are if early detection leads to effective treatment.

Letters to the Editor

A splash in the gene pool Round three in the great Ken Livingstone-Lord Hanson bout

Yet the test only identifies a genetic susceptibility to cer-tain forms of inherited breast cancer which account for only 5 to 10 per cent of all breast cancers. Such a test is, therefore, irrelevant to the vast number of women who even-tually develop the non-inherited forms of the dise

Even for a woman correctly identified as at risk of the inerited form, the options provided by the test are largely spurious. She may be advised to undertake regular breast self-examination or seek a mammogram to check for early signs of the disease. But because breast cancer is suffi-ciently common in women in

Moreover, mammograms in women under 30, precisely those being targeted by the esters, are notoriously unreso increasing the frequency of thy in this is a pointless gesture.

OUR discussion of the nies concerned but provide result in the termination of a breast-cancer gene no medical benefits to pregnancy where the fetus (Wars of the genes, May women. They instead will be can be demonstrated to be afwomen. They instead will be worried witless by being told they may develop a disease which they cannot prevent.

For these reasons we op-pose the marketing of any genetic test which does not provide clear medical benefits. The fact that such tests can come to market unregulated simply fuels our fear that, unless adequate legisla-tive controls are in place, commercial factors will once again ride roughshod over the needs of individuals already disadvanted by their genes. Julie Sheppard. The Genetics Forum,

5-11 Worship Street, London EC2A 2BH.

HE assumptions which appear to underpin David King's article on opposition to gene patenting (Business gets the upper hand, May 23) are that increased understanding this country, shouldn't all of the genetic basis of many women be advised to examine human diseases is inherently their breasts regularly? human diseases is inherently dangerous; and that those af-fected by genetic disease are somehow not to be trusted to make sensible decisions about the uses to which this information is to be put. Both these arguments are wrong. ot advances in scien tific understanding now make Our view is that this test is it possible for families to Genetic Interest Group. cynical development which make informed reproductive 29-35 Farringdon Road, will profit the testing compa- choices. For some, this may London EC1M 3JB.

fected by a severe disorder, but equally a test may demon-strate that the couple can expect a child free from a specific genetic disease. As science advances, so it may become possible to treat thes currently incurable condi-tions. The potential benefits of bio-technology are enor-mous, and we should not turn our backs on them through fear of their misuse.

David King suggests that there is a need to prevent carents from making private decisions about whether or not to terminate a pregnancy. Quite apart from the fact that the Abortion Act does not allow termination on the grounds of minor disability. the idea of some official list of conditions, where it is acceptable to terminate, is a much more frightening one. Most pregnancies which are terminated because a genetic dis-ease is detected are wanted pregnancies, and it is offen-sive to those in this difficult situation to suggest that their decisons are determined by the pursuit of an unattainable ideal, rather than by the wish to have a healthy baby.

Hanson, the most rapa-cious figure in Britain's sorry tale of asset-stripping and in-dustrial decline, puts me in interesting company (Making tracks on tax, May 20). Two years ago. Hanson wrote to years ago, Hanson wrote to John Major accusing the then Treasury minister, Stephen Dorrell, of "sounding like a socialist". Dorrell's crime had been to establish an inquiry on the impact of high dividend payments on Britain's appalling low levels of investment. Later, his investigation was wound up and he was moved to another ministry.

Hanson's argument is lit-tered with red herrings. I made no mention of central planning and have no propos-als that investment in private companies should be a decision for ministers. I seek to change the system of taxation and company law so that Brit-ain's financial institutions use the talents of their brightest and best staff to find domestic investment opportuni-ties rather than than concentrating on foreign speculative investment. Of course Hanson is totally opposed to any such change. Undoubtedly a shift of company profits from dividends blow to the City of London, large parts of which are geared up for takeover and other short-term speculative options. Britain's financial investment and against domanded in the UK is 4.09 per per cent in Germany and 0.73 per cent in Japan. Surely Hanson is not arguing that Britain's economy is more successful than that of Japan

Rather than answer facts like these, Hanson resorts to the old scare about a threat to the workers pension funds, a cry that will no doubt be taken up by the Tory party and their supporters in the press. But other countries maintain comparable pension levels to the UK without the same level of dividend payments. Pension levels, as with the entire economy, depend on economic growth; this is determined by investment levels. Pensions will be safer in a country which has a high investment rate and high growth, rather than short-term profit-taking in the form of high dividend payments. Ken Livingstone MP. London SW1A 0AA.

PAUL Richards (Letters, May 22) is right in saying that Ken Livingstone will have no influence over New Labour's manifesto. I wish I system is geared for foreign could share his confidence that Teresa Gorman is equally mestic investment. A move in isolated within he the direction of a German- or Phil Woodford. isolated within her party. Japanese type financial sys-tem organised to invest in do-London N4 3RA. Flat 2, 62 Tollington Park,

Wimp power

F ANYONE is talking "a lot of dangerous nonsense" about bullying it's Mike Eslea of the Sheffield Anti-Bullying Project (Letters, May 21). As someone who was bullied at school because I was a pahetic wimp, I used to dre about wreaking devastation upon my tormentors, not be-cause I wanted to be a bully. but because I did not want to be pushed around. If Eslea had been bullied, he would know that revenge is sweet. The only way in which I could have stopped the bullying was by being able to pulverise the bullies so they would treat me with caution. And the only way that this can be done is to stop little boys being wimps, which will not only help them defend themselves and earn respect, but stop them being pathetic inadequates when they grow young, or else they will have rotten childhood and a hopeless time as adults. Bullying will stop when kids are too tough, both physically and morally, to be pushed around.

If the weak and weedy are to become proper adults leading satisfying lives, they Lucas Street.

Europe's war to end all wars | Stage call

ISTENING to the Prime Minister outline the Gov-ernment's latest tactics over the ban on British beef, one could visualise Mr Major standing at the despatch box in short trousers, with his schoolchums bellowing en-couragement. Just isn't cricket, is it? These foreign johnnies don't play fair.

An incident of this nature would have seen Palmerstone dispatch a gun boat. Chur-chill would have vowed to "fight them on the beaches". Even Eden sent in paratroopers. Mr Major, however, has decided to take his bat and ball home. As we approach the 21st century, history should have taught us that unregulated, aggressive capitalism cannot be trusted to ensure the welfare of the consumer, safety being an erosion of profits. Little boys who take their bats home may find that they only have themselves to play with.

Peter Robinson 43 Westminster Road, Morecambe, Lancs LA4 4JH.

HE best way to retaliate against the Euro beef ban is to stop Germany, France, Italy, Holland etc from com-peting in the Euro 96 football championship. This would have the added bonus of marginally improving England's prospects. William Barrett. 6 Burns Road. London NW10 4DY.

OFIN Major's attempt to "Falklandise" the political relationship with Europe probably looked like a good idea in isolation, but I presume that the Government forgot the proximity of the forthcoming invasion of foot-ball fans? In one stroke it has created an extremely danger-ous situation. Mr Major's election-slogan list can now add "Come on over if you think you're hard enough". Brain Austin. 11 Alma Street, Weston-super-Mare, North Somserset.

ON JUNE 3 and 4 the Italian Presidency of the EU proposes to call an extraordinary agriculture council meeting. If the partial lifting of the ban on British beef still does not receive a qualified majority, but receives a cision will be left to the Euro-pean Commission. Since it was the commission which proposed the lifting of the ban in the first place, it is likely that it will stick to this line next month. Why then all the melodramatics from Eurosceptics?

Terry Wynn MEP. Rue Belliard 97-113, 1047 Brussels, Belgium. Please include a full postal address, even on e-mailed letters, and a daytime telephone number. We may edit letters: shorter ones are more

FOUR article on RSC/staff relations at the Barbican (Union threat as RSC seeks to quit London, May 15) includes some inaccuracy. Bectu has not notified the RSC over industrial action. Last week, the RSC did not and had no intention of announcing its destina tion for the six months' absence from the Barbican. It has just announced that an additional residency of four weeks would take place in Plymouth. Recent productions have not disappointed in box-office terms. We achieved 73 per cent capacity in 1995/96 with Shakespeare productions with Shakespeare productions playing to 77 per cent capacity. It is untrue that a £70,000 copyright bill came about because performance rights had not been cleared for Les Enfants Du Paradis. Simon Callow did not "disappear" after the press night of that production. He travelled to New York the next day to fulfil a prior engagement but remained in daily contact Adrian Noble Artistic Director, Royal Shakespeare Company. Barbican Centre, London EC2Y 8BQ.

PEGARDING the money learned by lawyers (May 22), a colleague tells me of of one US lawyer charging for a 25-hour day; he told his client that he had instructured two that he had just crossed two time zones. Mark Richards Brunel University, Uxbridge, Middx UB8 3PH.

A doctor diagnoses the fund

report on GP fundholding ing abortion rates have led to (May 22) describes large a crisis. This year's budget amounts of NHS money being spent for little health gain. I represent over 8,000 GPs who influence health spending regardless of their fundholding status or otherwise. We work in GP-commissioning groups in co-operation with our health authority. We get no government support.

Our national association has repeatedly called for the evaluation of fundholding (and GP commissioning) and it sees the Audit Commission report as simply a first step. Our local termination-ofpregnancy service was revamped last year. It has become so user-friendly that women who previously used the non-NHS sector now prefer this service. Rising hospilour fundaments and continuously service. Chair, New River Commissioning 8: 85 Tanners End Le London N18 ISB.

THE Audit Commission | tal costs, a pill scare and riswill buy only 50 to 60 per cent of the expected demand.

Fundholding alone cannot address this issue. Only a local group that tries to represent all patients and GPs, including fundholders, stands any chance of retaining pa-tients' respect whilst dealing with a cash crisis. There are, for instance. 500,000 people in Enfleld and Haringey. The funding gap for the service is about £200,000 — roughly the same amount paid out in management feet to management. out in management fees to any four fundholders (and their

400

1 d

Wants.

(Dr) Ron Singer. Chair, New River GP Commissioning Executive. 85 Tanners End Lane,

A Country Diary

Jenner, whose discovery of vaccination led, almost two centuries later, to the final elimination of smallpox, is being celebrated locally and nationally this year. It was in May 1796, at his practice in Berkeley in the Sevem Vale, that Jenner performed the cru-cial experiment. He innoculated young James Phipps with material from the infected lesions of coxpox on the hands of a milkmaid, Sarah Neimes. Sarah had contracted the infection from milking Blossom, reputedly a cow of the local, mahogany-coloured Gloucestershire breed, now uncommon. James subsequently proved immune. Smallpox, unknown to modern generations, was a dreadful scourge — it killed, blinded, and always seriously disfigured. For a long period, because of its ravages of the human face, servants were advertised as either having had, or to have, the pox. Jenner's discovery came at the end of a century in which a end of a century in which a number of attempts had been made to solve the problem of the disease but his perception

GLOUCESTERSHIRE: Edward | of the relationship between the smallpox was the clinical smallpox was the clinical breakthrough. His home is now a museum dedicated to keeping his memory green. The village also has its historic castle but has been better known this century for the nuclear generator, on the banks of the Severn, which was closed down after 30 years of operation and is now being slowly decommissioned. Jenner's was a unique achievement — smallpox is the only disease which has been eradicated. The last case occurred cated. The last case occurred in Somalia in 1977 and the World Health Organisation de-clared the disease extinct, apart from laboratory speciapart from aboratory specimens, in 1980. A disappointment for those celebrating the work of this local benefactor of the human race is that the Royal Mail has not been con-vinced of the case for a commemorative issue on the bicentenary. A poverty of perception indeed, especially when you look at the topics illustrated on some recent stamp issues.

COLIN LUCKHURST

Diary

di. 1996-

Matthew Norman

ET another missive arrives from our prolific correspondent
Dr Julian Lewis. The Central Office radio ham has, it appears, allowed his undergarments to become dangerously intertwined once again. This time, the bate concerns false suggestions again. This time, the bate concerns false suggestions that he has furched to the left, and now supports proportional representation. He did go to a meeting on PR, he insists, but only to slag it off. Speaking on the phone yesterday, Julian was adamant that unless the Guardmant that unless the Guardian publishes that letter, it's hi ho, hi ho, off to the Press Complaints Commission we go. But I think he was only go. but I tunk he was only teasing. If not, you have to wonder whether his skin is thick enough to cope with the task of fighting a general election. Julian is, of course, contesting New For-est East in the Conservative interest, and is keen to point out that he has not been an active member of the Labour Party since the 1970s, when he launched a one-man crusade in New-ham North East to save the OUBTS about which way the Daily Mail, and its mannerly mutilating editor Paul Dacre, will swing come the general election receded yesterday.

The front-page headline on Owen Oyston's rape conviction read: "Shaming of a socialist millionaire". Here we go again.

movement from the clutches of the far left.

Waiter Taki-George (upon whom, inciden-tally, Tom Conti based his character in Shirley Valen-tine) reports a crush on a fellow Spectator columnist. She is Petronella Wyatt, issue of Saucy Squirrel man Lord (Woodrow) Wyatt and his wife Lady Verucca. In his High Ball cocktail column, the Cypriot tries to turn Petsy on by turning off her compatriots. "To Continental men, sex is an elaborate game in which the male pursues and the female resists," he writes. "To Englishmen, sex is a task to be performed preferably alone . . . "Intriguing stuff . . . and, as so often, it is T-G's way with an anecdote that elevates his column. "I once rang her from Budapest, and got her mother instead," he reveals.

UMOURS that Sir Nick Lloyd may be continuing where he left off as as editor of the Express by doing PR work for John Major may be exag-gerated. 'T'm friends with Tim Bell and Maurice Saatchi." says Sir Nick (whom we pray suffers no allergy to ermine), "and I'm friends with the PM too, I think . . . though I should perhaps not say that. One tries to belp if asked, but then you don't get paid." So you have been approached, then? "Err, no, not as such. I think it's just been the normal friendly banter. I wish that Maurice or Tim would ask me . . . no, actually I mustn't say that. Really, the whole story isn't

ITH the launch party for Major, Major due last night, its author was natu-rally unavailable yester-day, so I was again compelled to scour the regional press for news. In Liverpool's Daily Post, he speaks of the profound influence of his father's honesty and perfectionism upon the man he calls "young John". "The words 'good enough' were not in father's vocabu-lary," says Terry. "It was either perfect or thrown to one side. When we were making garden gnome they were either right or they were thrown on the dump." The interview was clearly held before media intense, for Terry reports no firm plans when the in-

NONYMOUSLY, a reader has sent a press notice concerning the Environment Com-mittee, which is made up of 11 backbenchers, the financial wizard Roy Thomason among them. "I think we de-serve an explanation as to what this lot was up to." says the letter, and it has a point. "From April 18 to 25, the Committee will visit Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand," says the document. "No formal oral evidence will be taken during terview was over. 'I think a cup of tea is next on the agenda," be remarked.

Beware the curse of Michael Meacher

Commentary

Peter Preston

F Michael Meacher did not exist, it would be ut-terly necessary to invent him. For one thing, the Daily Mail needs a suppos-edly unreconstructed, foaming left-winger to get excited about. Whilst it's Meacher, blinking shyly like a furthereducation lecturer looking for skimmed milk in the tea room, the threat is self-evi-dently ludicrous (and will surely only be posed in power from very far away, as in Chargas Dauslonment). For Overseas Develonment). For another thing, Meacher gets into joyous scrapes which enhance the gaiety of the politi-cal nation. And for a final thing his latest scrape wakes a sleeping issue.

Simple facts and simple scrapings first. At the moment Michael is shadow emment Michael is shadow employment spokesman. He this rendition. Let us take Mr wrote an article in the latest issue of the (not exactly mass-

Labour in government may decide to do many things, including abolition of that allowance, it has not yet so decided. There was thus a fuss, and displeasure on high. Mr Meacher could not say that he had been misquoted. The article was clear and bore his name. He needed, however, to say something. At which point lan Willmore did the Captain Oates bit, Willmore was a Haringey councillor, but is curently a Mescher researcher. He was also, he avowed, the real author of the article that appeared under his boss's name. He'd got his facts about the allowance in a twist. Poor Michael had been too busy even to glance at the piece before a 19-pence stamp carried it to Red Pepper: a blameless, noble and traduced Meacher. But now lessons had been learnt and stable doors bolted.

"He will be reading all his articles and speeches in

Some hardened Meacher watchers, it is fair to note. Willmore's word for it, though. The feebleness market) left magazine. Red revealed is in any case quite Pepper. It said that Labour would abolish the jobseekers' look a hit of a chump. What's allowance. But alas: though rather more resonant is the way, with every passing day, that he appears to have got away with it, for that reveals something about modern poli-tics and the press that seemingly no one wants to see in continuing headlines.

When I sign my name on a cheque or letter, that means something and Michael Howard would probably pull my toenails out if it didn't. Butsuch mundane disciplines go by the board if I'm a politi-cian writing a piece for publication. Some MPs — Julian Critch ley, John Biffen, the word mountain called Hattersley — are proper writers who wouldn't dream of farming out their by-line. They cher-ish their craft. But such revthe first whiff of front-bench responsibility. Important men, from John F Kennedy on, have become too busy to write their own speeche you, the reader, think you are getting is usually not what you're getting at all.

Articles "by Tony Blair" may normally be divided (on sentence-length tests) between Alastair Campbell and David Miliband. Articles from the supposselly great David Miliband. Articles from the supposedly great and good flow down the conveyor belt with all the zest and individuality of Twiglet packets. I have before me a magnificent example of the genre from the News of World netitled "Not Guiler MT and entitled "Not Guilty M'Lud. Scott's cleared my Governscott's cleared 'my Government of Iraq arms smears — by John Major". They're all at it; they're all doing it, or rather not doing it. But it requires the majesty of Meacher to make the point.
He supposedly didn't even have a moment to read what

Critchley, Biffen, and Hattersley are proper writers who wouldn't dream of farming out their by-line he'd supposedly written.

And here we reach what my old tutor (one of the great custard was burning, or was They employ underlings, the article not actually intended to be read by anyone working journalists, to get their thoughts and phrases on to the Autocue. That's accepted practice, and it has swilled into newspaper articles too. Brutally, what press by scattering shadow

Brown. It is just there on the page, as imported balance, shovelied in after a flurry of telephone calls. We shall see hundreds more of the same before the election, each of them growing daily more clipped, hurried and ritual as the great test nears. Does it matter? Newspaper editors are big boys. They can be left alone with their circu-lation figures. But are the pol-iticians and their hand-persons — the implacable in relentless pursuit of the unreadable — doing themselves any favours? They'll happily spend two hours in a TV studio. They'll blearily trek in to Broadcasting House for a 6.55am joust with John Humphrys. But an hour put-ting something personal on paper — injecting a little pas-sion, or humour, or originality — has somehow become too much to ask. And what does that say about them - if any chance reader should, by accident, stumble into their paragraphs? Is the true curse of Meacher the threat of death

articles across them. But is the mere presence of a by-line and slab of type enough for such purposes? Consider, all too typically, a recent Gordon Brown piece in the Times. It begins by asserting that "tough choices are essential" in addressing youth unemployment. It continues by proclaiming that "Today (May 15) David Blunkett, Jack Straw, Chris Smith and I will show that we can solve this problem". A railway timetable of "policy initiatives" due for announcement that afternoon follows.

Bel Littlejohn

SUPPOSE it's because I care too much. I care about what's happening to our youngsters. I care about what's happening to our envi-ronment. I care about the shortlist for the Orange Prize for women's fiction. I care about who's going to win the election. I care about Peter Brian, and whether they'll ever be able to live together once more in perfect harmony.

'Nuff said, but all this car-ing all this worrying over the defining issues that face us all, all this ongst must eventually take its toll. Over the last few months, there have been complaints — some written behind my back, some delivered anonymously through my door, some leaked by unnamed "sources close to the Leader of the Opposition" to the murkier reaches of the Tory press — that I have become (and I quote) "snappy", "overbearing", "tetchy" and "power-crazed", "Among Blair's kitchen cabinet," wrote the political edi-inet," wrote the political edi-tor of the Observer last week, "the columnist and thinker Bel Littlejohn is said to be increasingly tense and irrita-ble, rounding on anyone who answers her back. Insiders say animosity towards Little-john is the only area within which Brown, Mandelson, Short, Wilson and Blair are in complete agreement."

Thank guys. Thank a bun-die. You slog your bloody guts out for the good of New Labour, and this is how you're repaid. These reports have all the hallmarks of a classic Alastair Campbell vendetta, and my littures are at present and my lawyers are at present looking into ways of curtailing them. But I'm not here to settle scores; far from it. I love Alastair, love the guy. I'm here to talk about exciting new research into the causes of medical disorders. For instance, for some time I have been worrying that I've been caring far too much: 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to be precise, and it's taking its toll. But looking up my problem good friend Susie Orbach's new medical guide-who give, give, give, give 'til they drop. Its symptoms? Irri-tability, general sullenness, hunger for power, an over-whelming desire to dominate, impatience with those in posi-tions above and beneath them tions above and beneath them.

Looking at Susie's percipient — truly, I love that word description of my symp-toms, I knew immediately that I too, was a victim of TCS. But I refused to take it lying down. As a high-profile sufferer of TCS. I aim to promote far greater awareness and understanding of the disease, so that in future people like me won't have to suffer the indignity of facing public criticism for the way we privately behave.

And so to my youngest kid, Jack. He's now 15 and a great kid, but for the past year I've been worried sick about him. There have been complaints at school that he's bad at reading and writing, that his attention is always wandering, that he's a disruptive influence in class, that he's rarely seen without a tube of Uhu up his nose in the corridors and that in the playground he bullies, taunts and blackmails children smaller than himself.

For a long time, I felt Jack was in danger of blaming him-self. But now, thanks to Susie, Jack and I need worry no more. Jack, it emerges after lengthy research, is suffering from an acute bout of PPD, of Perpetual Personality Disorder, poor love, brought on by a high-achieving mum, a protective extended family and a loving and caring home

IKE TCS, my own ill-ness, Jack's PPD tends to afflict highly intelligent and sensitive individuals with extremely well-developed skills in the fields of philanthropy and the arts. In this it differs from HAS, or Heightened Aggression Syndrome, which the experts say, is at its most virulent amongst coarse-grained individuals who are intellectually underdeveloped, emotionally stunted and unsure of their own sexuality. I am sending a copy of Susie's research into HAS to my colleague Alastair Campbell; it really could do him one hel-luva lot of good, if only he'd let

I'm very pleased, too, for my

ex. Steve. For the past 10 years, I've been to hell and back trying my damnedest to understand him: the way he is only interested in self, self, self, never bothering to listen when I want to talk about what I've been up to: the w he can never stop criticising book, Strength Through others for nagging; the way he way he workness: Your Personal III-ness Identified (HarperCollins about the sbortcomings of others, yet cannot see them in himself. Looking Steve up in Susie's magnificent book, I see that his problems conform to reveals, particularly affects women who worry about the sports of DLS, or Deadbeat Loser Syndrome. I now women who worry about others more than they worry about themselves, women who are naturally loving and generous and full of intellectual anyone could have ended up a and emotional fizz, women wreck like him. 'Nuff said.

Mutual reality it ain't

Are we being ripped off by government some essential way different from health care, as Michael The Government's record dustry. I'm not up to it, beand insurance companies over old-age care? Margaret Drabble wants answers - and offers the autumn of her life as a votive experiment

All political parties are well aware of this. Insurance companies are also well aware of it and are trying hard to sell us private health-care policies. The present government is encouraging them to do so. Insurance is a growth industry. The insurance companies are very happy with informaking that provision for making care and social support; resis with the individual" (May 7, 1996). Well, they would be happy with it, wouldn't they? Our financial safvisers and accountants are probably happy with it too. I and many others are not We are descreptions.

OST middleaged people are worried about health care in their old age.
All political parties are well aware of this. Insurance comnanies are also well aware of the reasonto any of them and even are from health care, as Michael Walzer, and other political theorists have powerfully argued. Anyway, look what happened to the building societies. They were founded on a principle of mutuality, and those of us who saved with them and took out mortgages through them believed that we were helping others to do the same.

All that has now gone by the board. People join building societies, as they buy privatised utilities, in the hope of making a quick one-off of making a quick one off profit. How can this be mutu-ally beneficial? What bappens to all that money the insur-ance companies are pocketing making that provision for mursing care and social support; rests with the individual? (May 7, 1996). Well, they would be happy with it it, wouldn't they? Our financial advisers and accountants are probably happy with it too. I and many others are not we need some explanations.

Some argue that it is the public duty of those who can afford it to go private. This seems paradoxical. What is easily so? I wrote story proper to all those who cannot afford private insurance? Can it be true that my taking out a private policy will in some of us (now many of us?) aren't going to get it back.

Substitutions grounded the substitutions grounded on the principles of mutualing more from the system than the poor and unpopens to all those who cannot afford private insurance? Can it be true that my taking out a private policy will in some of us (now many of us?) aren't going to get it back.

Substitutions grounded the substitutions grounded to be satisfied that the rich and on the principles of mutualing more from the system than the poor and unpopens to all those who cannot afford private insurance? Can it be true that my taking out a private policy will in some of us (now many of us?) aren't going to get it back.

Sut I won't cheat, Not unback.

Sut I won't cheat it won't cheat, Not unstance of us?) aren't going to get it back.

If health insurance were out personal insurance British Airways, which admitted in about a strickled to take out personal insurance. Of course, I'd like to be satisfied that the rich and on the principles of mutualing more from the system than the poor and unpart of the Libertarian played, (I've given up pointing out that I've been paying National Insurance contributions and amalgamations of the course of this with a substitution of the private policy on care in our old age. I'd like to end my division that I've been paying to prove the private on advice on personal pen-sions is enough to make el-derly and thinning blood run colder. Thousands were misled, millions of pounds were mis-spent, and apologies (and cause try as I may, I simply can't follow what would happen to the money that I am daily advised, in my own best interests, to pay out to protect mysalf.

there have been aponogen, are not reasouring.

This was not a good precedent. How can anyone trust this regime to give good advice about our old age? I refuse to waste my money on expensive premiums for me as I decline. You can tag me if you like. And if I and up in the dustbin instead of in a place comfortable retirement. But I will do the best I can.
I offer myself as a living specimen of the uninsured, disasters that I bope will never happen. (You can't insure against death, as such. Premature death, yes, but not death itself.)

AST time I insured my luggage I ended up, after several phone calls and letters, with a refund the surface of the contrast of nice comfortable retirement home, well, so be it. At least

More women are victims

A woman, on average, lives longer than a man. So she is more likely to have to face the difficulties of intestacy - the legal term for being left in a mess because her husband didn't make a Many men assume that, on their death, all they own will automatically go to their wives. This isn't so. When a man dies intestate, not just his wife but brothers, sisters and even cousins may have a claim on what he owned. His widow may have to sell the house to pay off his relations.

None of this need happen if he makes a will. Yet seven out of ten people fail to take this simple step.

Now, as a service to the public, WWF UK (World Wide Fund For Nature) has produced its own plain language guide to making a will. It explains:

 why everyone needs to make a will how to go about it and how to minimise tax liability on what you leave behind. Don't leave it to chance. Give vourself the peace of mind of knowing your loved ones are properly provided for. Send or phone for our FREE guide to making a Will, today.

Please send one my FREE cupy of your guide to Wills and Will-making, (Allow 28 days for delivers) Send to Nails Burranes, Legaries Officet/WWF L K Freepost, Panda House, Godalusing, Surves, GL 7 1BR, No stamp is needed. Regatered Charity Namber 30170 Guildford (0] 453) 426445

Patrick Cargill

Appearing in the Blood Donor as the perfect foil for Tony Hancock heralded Cargill's rise as a TV star in his own right

Straight to the comedy

HEN the actor Patrick Cargill. who died yesterday in his sleep at the age school play — was as Lady Macbeth and his professional debut, in Bexhill, was as From Hong Kong he invited Charile Chaplin — directing his last film — and Sophia Loren, his female star, for an Adam in Lot's Wife, for which he had to wear green swimevening meal at his west London home in Sheen. There were many grumbles from those in the large local acting shock the local ladies. Later he was to become a television Blood Donor episode of Hanfraternity who hadn't been incock's Half Hour and convited. The dinner and the disfirmed through Thames TV's series Father Dear Father, which rivalled Coronation affection both helped make the event and Cargill - who was only playing Marlon Brando's gentleman's gentle mid-1960s, ran for five years and was sold to 35 countries. man — part of cinema and theatre legend.

The extent to which Cargill, He also wrote plays. It was not the sort of thing expected of a Haileybury and who specialised in playing upper class, rather snakily sinister roles, had planned it Sandhurst man whose father that way was unclear, but the fracas certainly did no harm was in the Indian Army — which Cargill joined during the second world war. His lic character. He employed a military career ended with live-in French cook but him as an entertainments ofboasted that he would preficer, and he returned to Engpare a party for 80 single-handed. Often he was to be seen near his home walking one very large and one very small dog, while his monkey Josephine could always be relied upon to make her im-land with the equivalent of 50p in his pocket and sweated it out in rep theatres, princi-pally Windsor, for seven drome revue High Spirits made him better known. A de-cade later he was playing in 1,500 performances of the comedy Boeing-Boeing, taking over the lead for six weeks.

Blood and tears. . . . Cargill as the long-suffering doctor with Hancock's reluctant donor also appeared. He had his writing successes. He wrote an episode of one TV series in which he appeared. Top Secret. He was coauthor of Ring For Cutty, the play from which the film Curry On Nurse was made, and other plays. He also appeared in Carry On films as well as Doctor In Love usually as a smooth character

ARGILL made several appearances in BBC-TV's Hancock's Half Hour, but it was as the nonchalant doctor in the classic 1961 Blood Donor that he remained stony-featured in the face of Tony Hancock's in-creasingly miserable and desperate attempts to hang on to his own blood. He appeared in other roles with Hancock, always subservient to the star. Cargill's aloof persona was an ideal foil for comedians, although the role of straight man did not greatly appeal to him, as he loved to be the cen-

1969 directing Dorothy Tutin | who got into an argument in Play On Love in which he | with him about a parking space defused a splenetic con-frontation by addressing him civilly by name, thus signifying that he recognised him.
Cargill became content to park his Bentley elsewhere. It was not until Father Dear Father that he made his major television break-through. So closely did view-ers identify with his problems over his two fictional daughters, who he was supposedly struggling to bring up alone, that some asked his advice on family matters. He found this highly disconcerting, though eventually working out for-malised replies that took the heat off. Later his advice was sought when he played the five-times married hero of the less suc-cessful Many Wives of Patrick series. As a lifelong bachelor, he was in no position to res-pond very convincingly to enquirers about the domestic problems arising in either

In later years, he worked mainly on tour overseas in a company called British Air-ways Playhouse, run with BA him immediately. At the end of the war the Embassy Cargill's last play, for a different company, was a British tour of Michael Frayn's back-Theatre at Swiss Cottage in north London reopened and stage farce Noises Off. although he had recently been in the Far East for Nimmo in Patrick and I were both given contracts. I am not Wife Begins At Forty. He was even sure that we appeared due to go with that play to Bermuda but became ill with together on stage at the Embassy but it was part of the working process by which we became lifelong friends. Patrick played a lot of a brain tumour which, it was believed, was either caused or made worse when he was struck by a hit-and-run comedy, but he was a very good straight actor, and a Patrick Cargill's private life remained a closed book. man whose heart remained in the theatre. He was an actor with whom one felt completely secure on stage. relationships with either sex. The peak of his popular suc-cess came well before the tab-loids went into overdrive in the kiss and tell mode. He could be a hard task-master, but that was because he had really studied Priends always maintained he was essentially a pro. His marriage was to his first theatre job was in the early 1940s at the Dundee

Rep. and it was there that I met Patrick Cargill. He was kind, funny, enormously en-

His fame of course came through Father Dear Father, and it was Patrick who asked and it was Patrick who asked for me to be cast. My role was initially for one episode — but we went on from there, and later performed together back on the stage. He is gone, but warmth, friendship, and his laugh persist. I loved him.

Vera Chapman

Fantastic voyager

Green Knight, was published tracis have appeared the book remains unpublished when she was 71.

I had first met her seven Blacedud The Birdman — years earlier, in London's fan-tasy and science-fiction book-shop, Dark They Were And Golden Eyed, the forerunner of Forbidden Planet. Verz, was known to her friends as Polledones. Took. Beliadonna Took — the mother of Bilbo Baggins in JRR Tolkien's Lord Of The Rings — and the name swited her admirably. The Tooks were an adventurous lot, born organisers and leaders. That was vera, a tall, upright, ter, in Bournemouth, and in grey-haired yet ebullient lady, Miss Marple with magic. She loved stories of mambership of Oxford Unimyth and legend and was keen to find fellow enthusi-asis. This emberance led herto establish the British Tolkein Society in 1969, an organisation which is still Vera Chapman had long de-lighted creating tales for her children and grandchildren, and encouraged by Tolkein Society members, including Tolkien himself, she pro-duced a sequence of Arthurian stories. The Green Knight, The King's Damosel and King Aritur's Daughter were published in Britain in the mid-1970s, but as chil-dren's books missed their pri-mary audience. It was not until their 1978 American and British paperback publica-tion as a single volume, The found their true readership. Vera Chapman's books may nist Arthurian fantasies, seven years ahead of Marion The first two novels took the the well known Authurian legends of Gawain and the Green Knight and Gareth and the Lady Lynett and explored the world of chivalry and adventure through the eyes of three young women, Vivian, Lynette and Ursulet. The Green Knight was included by the National Book League amongst its children's books of the year. The King's Damo sel has been made into a Warner Bros animated fea-

ERA Channan, who fourth Arthurian novel. The has died aged 98. Enchantresses, which exstarted her third plores the lives of Morgan le career, as a writer, in Fay and her sisters. While ex-

about Britain's first aeronaut and founder of Bath - a saucy retelling of Chaucer's The Wife Of Bath and two children's books Judy And Julia and Miranty And The

"Although I always mean to write, I have had so many other things to do," was how she explained her late start. She was born Ivy May Fo versity. She graduated in 1921 and three years later married sionary, she as a teacher but after a year they returned to England. Her husband died in the late 1930s of an ailment contracted in Africa. After came a student welfare officer at Colonial Office civil servant, retiring in 1963.

She was for many years a member of the Order of Bards, Orates and Druids. She is survived by one daughter, four grandchildren and eight greatchildren.

Jack Baines

pression on visitors. He called his parrot Pavement-such an aristocratic bird sim-ply had to have a double-bar-

Impression of the peaks

no longer justify continuing to publish". I relayed this to Jack Baines, who has died aged 57. "Good thing," he rasped back. "Let's hope it continues like that till there's a minority of one - the Er-

The Press, co-founded by Jack and printer Peter Hodgkiss, was a phenomenon within the book-hungry international climbing commu-nity. In its 11-year existence the shoe string outfit built up an indispensible list of original and reprinted mountain writing which included Dave Cook's bicycle-climbing grand tour to India, Steve Dean's biography of Colin Kirkus, and three winners of mountaineering literature's most prestigious prize, the Boardman Tasker Award

Jack was born in Preston. trict's hills in his early teens, and became a weekend habi-tué of Langdale's Wall End Barn at a time when that esthe testosterone-fuelled ancillary activities of the climbing arranged to meet his three main companions over the holiday to climb on Ben Nevis. His father forbade him to go. His three friends were killed in an avalanche. The incident, and reportage of the recovery of their bodies, fired Jack with the desire to become a mountain rescuer, and the best way he saw to that end was through the Royal Air Force.

He joined as a general fitter in 1956 and eventually he was sent to Hong Kong, where there were sea-cliffs to climb. From there he mounted an ex-pedition to Carstenz Pyramid in Papua New Guinea - Australasia's highest peak — of which he and the Cambridge mountaineer Dick Isherwood made the second ascent by a difficult new route. Back in Britain Jack was posted suc-cessively to RAF bases at Leu-chars, Kinloss and Valley, in each of which he figured prominently in the rescue teams, rising to team leader at the latter before he retired, as a flight sergeant, in 1978. The following year he was awarded the British Empire Medal for his services to mountain rescue. He then brought the same second career as a bookseller and publisher. Having settled during his time at Valley in Anglesey, he and his wife Pat opened a business there, An-glesey Books, which specialis-ing in mountaineering litera-ture. He soon established himself as one of the ton three himself as one of the top three dealers in the country, inde-fatigably pursuing rare titles and charging — relatively — reasonable prices.

It was a small step to publishing his own titles: "I'd gone up to Glasgow to buy some books from Peter Hodgkiss, who prints all the Scot-tish guidebooks, and we got tish guideocous, and we got talking. This was in October 1994, and we chatted on for an hour or two about the titles we'd like to see re-published. The big question was how much would it cost. Peter said it would be £2,000 for Kilgour's Twenty Years on Ben Nevis. I put in a thousand, he did the same, and off we went."

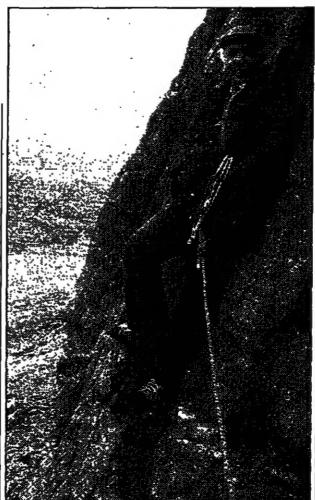

I doubt if Jack made much money from the books he put into circulation, but if a thing was worth doing, if it spoke for and to the community of which he was a part, he'd back it, even when bigger publishing houses wouldn't

OUNTAINEERING, | bikes, drinking, fighting. One | organisational zeal and tena- | consider it. In doing so, he a publisher once | pre-Christmas weekend Jack | clous pursuit of quality to his | gained enormous goodwill. Stocky, abrasive, with a mop of grey hair and bags under his eyes, he was en-tirely ruthless in bargaining. I lost most of my library to him at lean times over the years. He had a serviceman's wit, treading the finest of lines between mischief and malice, and a sharp eye for character and its weaknesses.

On maybe the last rock-climb he ever did, Kirkus's Marble Slab on a bitter November day two or three years ago, I remember his zest for the conflict, his exul-tation. Thereafter, he was never quite the same. The sudden onset of rheumatoid arthritis restricted him and made him miserable: the retreat from the word in Thatcher's Britain baffled But he believed in the worth of his project. He brought it to reality. A flight of Wessex helicopters hovered over his fumeral. He's remembered by many with gratitude.

John ("Jack") Baines, born November 25, 1938; died May 13,

Jack Baines . . . talking the step into publishing JIM PERRIN

Rebecca Livingston

REBECCA Livingston, who caught in Biban Kidron's film has died aged 33, was part of Carry Greenham Home. She the last 30 years' counterhistory, writes Richard Cabut. A Gloucester magistrate's daughter, she was drawn to punk and London in the midseventies. As Pinkl — reflect-ing her hair colour — she was politicised by the Kings Cross squatting scene, and human-ised by encounters with violence and drug-based death. In 1981 she was a founder of the Greenham Peace Camp and was there for four years. On one occasion, soldiers were faced with a hopping Pinki and her colleagues dressed as an Easter bunnles; on another, a bailiff kicking Pinki in the stomach was

Birthdays

Stanley Baxter. comedian. 68; Eric Cantona, footballer. 30; Bob Dylan, singer, 55; Kathleen Hale, children's author and illustrator, 98; Dame Joan Hammond, soprano, 85; Liz McColgan, athlete, 32; Steven Norris, MP, minister of state for Transport, 51; Luke Rittner, for mer secretary-general, Arts Council, 49; Archie Shepp, jazz musician, composer, 59; Jeremy Treglown, biographer, former editor TLS, 50; William Trevor, writer, 68 Arnold Wesker, playwright, was five months pregnant, for five hours before a doctor was called. The child, Sky, survived. Later she co-founded the Avebury Women's Festival, and helped organise the 1983 Stop The City demonstration, the anti-poll tax and the anti-Criminal Justice Bill campaigns.

In 1985 she changed her name to Tanith and began to study anthropology — con-centrating on the Sumerian civilisation — and interna-tional law, involved in the mittal planning of the Newbury campaign, failing health prevented her from attending.

Death Notices

Acknowledgments

Jackdaw

Prime pigs

BETWEEN stints as prime minister. Winston Churchill retired to a country farm, where he was fond of taking walks with his grandson. He especially liked pigs, his grandson remembered in a recent television interview.
One day the elder Churchill stopped to stroke the pigs' backs with the end of his walking stick. "A cat looks down upon a man, and a dog looks up to a man," the Nobel prize-winner confided to his grandson. "But a pig will look a man in the eye and see his

Stanley E. Curtis, profes-sor of animal sciences at Pennsylvania State University, intends to find out whether Churchill was right. wants to know what swine know, and more.

"In particular, we want to know how the animals feel, not how a human being might think they feel," Curtis says. "And we have every reason to believe that they ion't see the world as we see Curtis plans to explore what goes on in a pig's mind eye, using technology already established for the study of the mental capac-ities of primates, including teenagers: video games. Of course, we can easily operate joysticks; Curtis intends to modify technology so that pigs, using their snouts, can interact with videos. (Because pigs are notoriously shortsighted, a choice of glasses, contacts or radial keratotomy needs to be

Assuming all those problems can get pig-ironed out, we can start to fathom what they fathom. Because pigs have at least six calls, Curtis's ultimate dream is to determine the behavioral con-texts of their individual yelps: "I would like to see the day when we could use syners to engage in conversa-tions with them in their own

"If we could have the pigs themselves participate on the team that's designing the piece of equipment or the fa-cility that they're living in, that would be great," Curtis says. But what if the commusays, but what it mechanic nication we get is "Porkers of the World Unite""? Pork barrelscience in the Scientific American.

Do net fear

Technophobia can be treated. In serious cases, a combina-tion of drugs-of-your choice therapy and pop psychology can be used to help "think" your way to freedom from fear. This can be a gradual process, so you may have to repeat these steps innumera ble times, until you get it

1. Resolutely decide to overcome your phobia and face up | Ooh - what's that on your to your irrational feelings. 2. Set a date to begin. Tomorrow....

3. List what you want to thing modest, for example: will walk into the room, switch on my PC, wait three minutes for Windows 95 to load, select the internet icon, breathe deeply a couple of times, exit all programmes and turn the machine off.". L Write down words of encouragement on prompt cards. "My modem is supposed to make funny beepy noises and have flashing red lights. This is perfectly nor-not explode." 5. Desentisise yourself by imagining that you're con-fronting your phobia. Keep thinking about using the PC after 9pm when the technical support lines have closed, until this ceases to terrify /OU. 6. Make a timetable for carrying out each confrontation

session. Start off with some-thing not too difficult. Right-click the mouse button while using Netscape Navigator.

what you've achieved at the end of each session. net gives advice for nervous surfers. Pity the Unibomber does not subscribe. Empty pleasure Those of us who get pleasure screen? Haven't seen that be-fore. "This progam has per-formed an illegal func-tion..." Leave the room quickly and phone the police

7. Note your progress by ring-ing your Mum and telling her way surprised at its great popularity as a collective entertainment. But there are many who do not understand see it as deplorable because, they say, football alienates and impoverishes the masses -distracting them from important issues.

Those who think like this forget that what characterises entertainment, however intense and absorbing (and a good game of football is enormously intense and absorbing), is that it is ephemeral.

ous. An experience where the effect disappears at the same time as the cause.

Sport for those who enjoy it, is the love of form, a spectacle that does not transcend the physical the concept the

the physical, the sensory, the instant emotion; a spectacle that, unlike a book or a play, scarcely leaves a trace in the memory and does not enrich or impoverish knowledge.

This is its appeal: it is excit-ing and empty.

For that reason, intelligent and unintelligent, cultured

.net . . . therapy on offer

equally enjoy football. But that's enough for now. The King has arrived. The teams have come out. The World Cup has been officially opened. The game is beginning. That's enough writing.

A gentle kick is aimed at those who spin fancy theories to explain the passion for football

Gas guzziers

Let's enjoy ourselves

RUSTY petrol-driven lawn mowers are being snapped up by the aerospace companies and other businesses around Los Angeles. Under new regulations, companies can buy up secondhand garden equipment to earn clean-air "credit", and so avoid fines should their own emissions exceed pollution limits.

The aim of the plan is to speed up the replacement of old gas-guzzling garden machines by making them a valuable commodity. "The credit is sort of a pollution eurodollar,"explains Sam Atwood of the South Coast Air Quality Mana

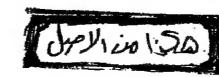

District. "Businesses can trade these credits, or use them to to make sure they meet emissions goals." Buy-ers win the credit only if they verify that the old machines officials hope that the programme will dispose of many of the estimated 1.7 million old mowers, leaf blowers, chain saws and other garden tools now in use around Los Angeles.

This ageing fleet belches out 22 tonnes of smog-forming chemicals a day — more than is produced by all the aircraft that fly through the five air-ports in the area. Since last August, all small petrol mo-tors sold in California have had to meet much higher emission standards.
The New Scientist reveals the the real poliuters.

Jackdaw wants your jewels. Estanda unas your jewes. e-mail jackdaw@guardian .co.uk, fax 017:713 4366, Jack-daw, The Guardian, 119 Farringdon Road, London ECIR SER.

Emily Sheffield

rdian Friday May 24 1866

Financial Editor: Alex Brummer Telephone: 0171-239-9610 Fax: 0171-833-4456

Finance Guardian

Unloved C&W soldiers on

Nicholas Bannister Technology Editor

ABLE & Wireless Britain's second largest telecoms group, falled to end deep-rooted City scepticism about its cord profits and an increased dividend yesterday.

The group's full-year results for 1995-96, coming just a month after the collapse of ambitious plans to create a £35 billion world-class com-munications group through a merger with British Telecom, left the shares 21p lower at

Pre-tax profits rose 59 per cent to £1.31 billion on turn-over up 7 per cent at £5.52 billion. However, the profit rise was only 10 per cent after exceptional items were exget a 10 per cent increase in dividend.

Acting chief executive Rod Olsen said: "We have out-performed the PTSE index on earnings and dividends for the past 15 years and even more so during the past five

Analysts attributed the City's reaction to the results to uncertainty about the strategic direction of the group under a new chief executive and to a belated realisation that the group would remain an independent entity.

Chairman Brian Smith said that C&W was probably bid-proof following the collapse of the BT merger talks. He said the group's 58 per-cent stake in Hongkong Telecom — its main profit centre — was not for sale but added that he would talk to the i Chinese government if it wanted to take a stake.

The company confirmed that it was having talks with Stet, Italy's state-owned tele-com group, But Mr Olsen said that talk of a deal was prema-

Stet was its preferred part-ner in Italy because of its scale and broad range of its activities, he said.

He said the group was trying to strengthen its position in three areas — Europe, Asia and the US. It already had partners in France and Germany and was seeking one in ingston

Death Notices

ACLICERSON

54 × 1

Going it alone... Chairman Brian Smith sees Cable & Wireless as probably bid-proof after collapse of merger talks with BT PHOTOGRAPH: MARTIN ARGLES number of deals in the US. Dick Brown, the American telecom executive due to take over as C&W's chief executive, is expected to spearhead the expansion in the US.

Mercury Communications, the group's 80 per cent owned UK telecom company, lifted operating profit by 14 per cent to £281 million on turnover 8 per cent ahead at £1.69 billion. The improvement stems from the restructuring programme started 18 months ago.

Peter Howell-Davies, its chief executive, said em-ployee numbers, now down to 7,900, were unlikely to change greatly during the coming cent.
year though resources may be The Spain.

Spain.

Spain.

Switched, particularly into cost savings last year of £62 and the savings and syner.

It had established bridge improving the company's heads in Singapore and in quality of service.

Switched, particularly into cost savings last year of £62 and the savings and syner.

Mr Howell-Davies said which led to the departure the savings and syner.

Switched, particularly into cost savings last year of £62 and the savings and syner.

Bell Canada was playing an of chairman Lord Young strong than might have been active part in Mercury's delay. Beijing, and expected to do a Mercury was having prob-hang on to their talephone phone companies.

The situation underlined the need for the industry reg-ulator to have powers to deal with anti-competitive behaviour, he added. During the year Mercury's residential customers declined by 2 per cent to 740,000 mainly because the company had weeded out customers who were poor payers. Over-all, business and residential call volume rose by 13 per lems negotiating a number of portability agreements with Mercury seeks a one-to-one with cable firms BT which allows customers to

MERCURY Communica-tions wants to estab-lish closer ties with Bell Cablemedia, possibly leading to a merger, writes

Chief executive Peter Howell-Davies said yester-day that a priority was to build closer links with the cable companies who al-ready use Mercury for about 80 per cent of their keen to rebuild our com- velopment. "We have not lloss

mercial relationship with | leveraged the opportunity the Bell Cablemedia first," to work with them as much

Mercury is 80 per cent owned by Cable & Wireless, which has a 12.8 per cent stake in Bell Cablemedia, and 20 per cent owned by Bell Canada International which owns the bulk of the cable company's shares.
Bell Cablemedia's main franchise areas are in Lonwho were poor payers. Overall, business and residential call volume rose by 13 per cent.

The restructuring led to nat

the cross-shareholdings

long distance and internadon, Leeds, Southampton, Hastings and the Northeast. It also owns 26 per cent of Videotron, the cable
the cross-shareholdings group floated last year.

as I would have liked in the past. links with Vebacom, C&W's joint venture with the German utility Veba.

Mr Howell-Davies took over at Mercury last year after Duncan Lewis, the man brought in to sort out the company's problems, resigned because of the lack of direction at C&W. Mr Lewis's resignation focused public attention on the boardroom row at C&W

Notebook

Election winners in short supply

Alex Brummer

WHICHEVER way you cut it, the British economy is not performing in the way the Changelon forecast in his News cellor forecast in his November Budget. Instead of the predicted 3 per cent growth, which would have delivered a better outcome for public bor-rowing, the CBI is plumping for 3 per cent, which is where Kenneth Clarke's summer forecast is likely to come out.

As the first quarter gross domestic product data shows the real problem for the economy is the manufacturing sector which has been hindered by slow growth in Europe, the build-up of stocks and the miserable capital spending which comes with gloomy prospects.

Looking shead, the CBI seems to think that manufacturing ouput will continue to be sluggish at around 1 per cent this year, against the 1.7 per cent it forecast in February.

The saving grace for the Government is that the consumer sector, which was so constrained during the early part of this upswing in the economic cycle, is now look-ing healthier. The first quarter GDP data show spending to have been more buoyant in the first quarter than at any time in the last two years, and that was before the April tax cut and the most recent reductions in mortgage rates started to come through. Neverthless, this is not the consumer boom which many analysts see as the real dan-ger to stability in the economy. Retail sales in April were below expectations, but the annual rate of increase is still in the order of 2.2 per cent. household goods. But the improvement in the housing sec-tor, together with the healthy revival reported in home furnishings at Marks & Spencer. suggests that this is not too much to worry about.

Where there is room for concern is the impact of slower growth on the PSBR, already battered by tax shortfalls and the cost of the beef crisis. As the CBI observes in its new forecast, the room for tax cuts appears to be increas-ingly limited. It suggests that there is only safely room for a giveaway of around £2 billion. This is hardly an election winning number.

Telecom legacy

CK Brown, the American telecom executive soon to take the helm at Cable & Wireless, will find that the financial housekeeping has been well done, despite all the distractions of service in exchange for better the putative merger with Brit-

At first sight, the group's 59 per cent profit rise looks stun-ning, though when exceptional items are stripped out the rise is a more modest 10 per cent.

But Hongkong Telecom continues to grow, the restructuring of Mercury Communications is bearing fruit, and some associated ventures are moving into the black.

Gearing is up, reflecting the Vebacom deal in Germany, but is expected to fall during the current year, while head office costs have been halved over the past three years.

However, there will still be plenty for the new chief executive to get his teeth into. Mercury still has a long way to go, both in terms of efficiency and growth.

Further afield, success in Europe will depend upon while expansion in the Far East will depend upon steer-ing Hongkong Telecom through the colony's transition to Chinese rule without checking new developments or partnerships elsewhere in the region.

If anything last year's Lord Young and chief execu-tive James Ross, coupled with the predatory interest from BT, has welded the remaining management into a more de-termined team than before.

Perhaps Mr Brown's big-gest task will be keeping that enthusiasm going at a time when the BT merger experience has shown that C&W is virtually bid proof for the

Burden sharing

UDITORS are likely to A UDITORS are there is find little sympathy in their attempt to shuffle away from liabilities to discuss of the uyers of businesses whose finances turn out to be rather less than was suggested by the certified accounts. But their case put to the Govern-ment does have some merit.

The core issue of joint and bit of a red herring. If they don't like it, partnerships can incorporate. They will soon be able to achieve limited liability in Jersey and possi-bly elsewhere. In any case, sharing responsibility as well as profit is a key part of partnership.
The more difficult issue is proportionality — paying up according to the degree of negligence — which remains even if limited liability protects individual, innocent

It does not seem sensible that an aggrieved litigant can sue any professional for tens of millions of pounds lost in some disaster, even if the ex-tent of the professional negli-gence was minor. The liabil-ity should be based on the extent of the negligence.

There are two problems, however. First, firms have not helped matters by being too scared to take most claims to court, thus encouraging lit-igants who can be fairly sure of an out-of-court settlement. Second, auditors and others would have to deliver a better protection, and that is far

Moores family revises strategy

Martyn Naissil

IVISIONS among the wealthy Moores family weathly Mootes faility
- which controls Britain's largest private company, the Littlewoods retail empire — resurfaced yesterday as it approved a revised plan for the firm's development in the face of the ment in the face of the National Lottery's success.

A brief statement issued after the company's annual meeting — held behind closed doors in Liverpool — said that James Ross, the former Cable and Wireless director, was "overwhelmingly endorsed" as the new chairman responsible for implementing the new strategy.

Mr Ross, who was sacked from C&W after boardroom from .C&W after boardour conflict, replaced Leonard van Geest, Littlewoods' chair-usan for six years, who earlier "agreed" to step down from his £225,000 position. Mr van Geest was yester-day thanked by the board for his "sign! Seart contribution" his "significant contribution" during a challenging period for the group — which saw the grandchildren of the firm's founder, Donatella and Alexis Moores, push for the takeover plans. takeover plans.

Yesterday's 45 minute meeting agreed revised Articles of Association "as part of the ongoing process to bring the Group's corporate governance into line with best practice". Mr Ross said the shareholders' confidence in him and the new governance arrange-ments provided a "clear man-date" for the revised strategy. The agm was the first since the family directors buried reported differences in Dereported differences in December to protect the company's independence by rejecting competing takeover offers that would have valued their personal shareholdings at more than £1 billion.

prices at which they will buy and sell shares.

But he is making it clear that he will want to see that he w

Nuclear sale blow as £700m cut from value

Simon Bearin and Chris Berrie

HE Government's offi-cial advisers on the sale of British Energy have had to issue warnings of threats to the company's value ahead of July's privatisation of the nuclear industry.

In a highly unusual move, BZW has slashed estimates of the industry's worth by at least $700 million after poised to unveil its marketing campaign for British Energy next week, BZW is now saying that the industry's likely flotation value will be between £1.7 billion and £2.1 billion, compared with £2.4 billion to £2.8 billion two is taken into account. Close reading of the original BZW document shows the broker made its first estimate "excluding any debt that may be injected". BZW also warns that a temporary collapse in wholesale electricity prices in the so-called pool from 2.4p to 2p per kilowatt/hour would wipe the industry's worth by at least 2700 million after repeated criticism of an optimistic assessment that drew flak from the City and the industry.

With the Government with the grant of the continues on British Energy.

Originally, BZW had argued that pool prices were likely to stay at their present level and this, in part, allowed it to put such a high price on British. Energy. Although it continues to stick to this, it acknowledges that other generating companies say there will be a price collapse.

In a further admission of widespread unease in the City

a debt injection into British would achieve 83.5 per cent Energy of nearly £700 million | output performance against a

Now, employing new indus-try figures, it is using a financial model based on load factors averaging 77.5 per cent — a considerable concession to critics of the privatisation. The bank says that every

1 per cent off output perfor-mance wipes £140 million of British Energy's value. It says that early closure of one station could cost £500 million in one year and that the loss of a reactor for a year through breakdown would cost £100 million in lost cashflow. BZW predicts that the company will spend £100 million on dividends in its first year in the private sector and con-firms that this will have to be paid out of cash reserves, since the industry has a record of heavy losses.

2.4 billion to £2.8 billion two months ago.

Trying to gloss over the revision, BZW claims that its latest estimates are in line with the earlier forecast once winds.

Widesprend unease in the Chy about the sale of seven advanced gas cooled reactors and Sizewell B, BZW says there are worries about the performance of reactors. It understood that this is still under consideration.

Market makers could lose stamp duty exemption

THE Chancellor, Kenneth Clarke, is looking at ways of reforming the way share deals are taxed in a move which will effectively mean market makers will have to justify their existing exemption from paying stamp duty.

Plans for change have been prompted by the evolution of share dealing in the City, not least the Stock At present, most UK equi-ties are traded via a "quote-driven" system — based on market makers quoting prices at which they will 'order-driven" mechanism which tries to match buy-ers and sellers directly. Market makers argue that in providing liquidity to the equity market by their will-ingness to buy or sell on demand, they are also risking their own money and that justifies their exemption from stamp duty, which is levied at the rate of one half of 1 per cent on each transaction. · action.

Yesterday, Mr Clarke indicated that he saw "some merit in retaining a distinction, for tax purposes, be-who provide extra liquidity to the market, and final investors."

tween active share traders, which brings in some E1.3 billion a year to the Treasury — by showing that they make "a significant contribution to price setting" as well as "contributing substantial extra liquidity". Consultation on a reform programme will be carried out by the Securities and Investments Board with Mr Clarke looking for a system which is "readily police-able and enforceable." The Exchange yesterday reported a 44 per cent fall in profits to £9.5 million in the year to March 31 because it spent £19.5 million

Compared the Control of the Control

on the introduction of its new electronic settlement

Sooty is sold on showbiz bigtime

ROGER COWE on a Blackpool

glove puppet's 48-year career

OOTY, who cost just 7s 6d (37.5p) nearly half a century ago, is to join the list of children's characters hitting the big time after being sold yesterday for over £1 million by Matthew Cor-bett, son of the bear's inventor.

The buyer of the television puppet, merchant bank Guinness Mahon, plans to invest £300,000 in the character to create the kind of business which now surrounds Thomas the Tank Engine. Noddy and other Enid Blyton characters were recently sold for £14 million to the Trocadero, which has ambitious plans to exploit them in books, videos, toys and sales of £1 million a year from toys and tricks, and is licensed to stores such as

Sooty, left, and his 'consultant'

make him a merchandise A spokesman for Guinness

Mahon, which is backing the management team in The Global Rights Development Fund, said the character Fund, said the character would be updated and exploited in different formats and territories. There are already plans for TV series in Japan and the US.

Mr Corbett will remain as a consultant until he retires when he reaches 50 in two.

when he reaches 50 in two years' time. With the kind of puns which could grace a Sooty TV script he quipped: "I have worked hand in glove years but now it is time for him to stand on his own two feet. My wife Sally and I are delighted with the deal and sooty is as happy as a bear with a jar of honey."

Sooty first became a TV star in 1956 after his first owner, Harry Corbett, was spotted by a BBC talent scout. Mr Corbett was a part-time Sooty has already built up bear in Blackpool in 1948 to amuse his children. His son Matthew took over in 1977 and the show moved to Marks & Spencer, which sells Sooty cakes. ITV. Matthew said yesterday that his own children — a Sooty cakes.

Mr Corbett said yesterday rock musician, a trainee he had not been able to put teacher and a would-be doctor enough money into Sooty to - did not want to take over.

PHOTOGRAPH MARTIN ARGLES

Magellan chief quits as he sails into poor-return storm

JEFFREY VINIK, the $6 million-a-year manager of Fidelity Magellan, resigned yesterday from the world's largest mutual fund amid crit-icism of its lacklustre returns

this year. Mr Vinik was also embroiled in controversy lan to new investors or take recently for making upbeat the more radical step of comments on companies at the time his $56 billion (£37 billion) fund was selling those shares.

The life tracker is the life of the life tracker is the life tracker i

His resignation caps months of upheaval at Fidelity, the colossus of the mutual fund industry with $400 billion in assets or 13 per cent of the $3,000 billion Americans have invested in mutual funds.

His resignation caps promante for Fidelity despite recent weak returns.

For the last five years, the fund has produced an average annual return of 15.7 per cent, one and a half percentage points better than the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index.

But Mr Vinik's performance. mutual funds.

In March, Fidelity reshuffled portfolio man-angers at 26 of its 239 funds, but left Mr Vinik in charge of its flagship Magellan fund.

Robert Stansky, who like Mr Vinik, worked under mutual fund legend and former Magellan manager, Peter Lynch, will now run Magellan. He will now run Magenan. He takes over amid widespread criticism that Magellan has become too big and unwieldy. Some analysts have urged

dard & Poor's 500-stock index But Mr Vinik's performance

TOURIST RATES - BANK SELLS Australia 1.8425 France 7.63 Austria 15.90 Germany 2.2800
Belgium 48.38 Greece 360.00
Canada 2.02 Hong Kong 11.38
Cyprus 0.6970 India 52 89

Italy 2,309 Mate 0,5390 Netherland 2,53 New Zeeland 2,15 Norway 9.72 Portugal 233.00 Saudi Arabia 5.64

Singapore 2.08 South Africa 6.36 Spain 188.00 Sweden 10.11 Switzerland 1.855

Loss-maker Iberia joins talks on BA's global alliance

RITISH Airways is planning to extend its influence in Europe beyond France and Germany with a possible link-up with the lossmaking, heavily-subsidised Spanish state airline, Iberia The tie-up would also give BA access to Iberia's Latin American empire where the Spanish carrier remains inbeen forced to sell most of its stake in the Argentinian airline, Aerolienas Argentina, to pay off debts of £440 million. BA's continuing search for a global alliance with other carriers has been going on for some months. News of a possle connection with Iberia leaked in Holland several months ago, but it was confirmed in Madrid yesterday by sources close to the industry ministry. BA adopted its ormal stance on mergers, by refusing to comment. The Madrid reports suggest that BA wants to buy a 10 to 15 per cent stake in Iberia at a cost of $100 million (£65 million). Iberia said that it was looking for a three-party, strategic agreement with "one US and another European airhas been in the red for some time, would also want the three airlines to have cross shareholdings to make the agreement "more solid". Iberia said that "negotia tions are on course" with several airlines. Among these are the Dutch airline, KLM, and American Airlines. This could be significant, since BA has been involved in wellpublicised merger talks with American and in a more private parley with Delta.

Airline business deals depend very much on the atti-tude of governments. Informal talks this week between the British and American departments of transport have achieved very little. Formal links between BA and an American carrier, plus an-other European carrier like Iberia, still look some way off. The biggest drawback in a BA-Iberia link-up is the parlous state of the Spanish carrier. It lost almost $2300 million last year, although since then the management has introduced savage cost cutting to try and get into the black within a year.

Until Iberia's emergence as a candidate, BA's most likely partner in Europe has looked like KLM, with whom it has been talking for some time. line" as part of its plans to The talks have not collapsed create a global alliance.

One of the most important gains for BA in a deal with a European carrier would be a considerable reduction in costs. Senior industry manag ers have stressed that some o the access charges to key air-ports in Europe are 20-40 per cent up on their equivalents in the UK.

so costly to fly from Britain to some destinations in Europe. For a European carrier, a deal with BA would give it improved access to Heathrow. BA would, therefore, dearly like another partner in Europe. Industry observers suggested last night that the Spanish government would have to be prepared to sell off a stake in Iberia to a company like BA. The changing political climate in Spain, with the recent election of a right-wing administration makes that more likely.

In general, European airlines are making more profit than for some time. Operating profits on international totalled $1.05 billion in 1995 compared with a loss of $90 million in 1994. The Association of European Air-lines said that the results were due to cost savings, although the bulk was passed on in the form of lower fares

Cloudy start . . . Chief executive Ian Harvey (right) and finance director Rusi Kathoke concentrating on existing inventions

Red ink fails to slow down patent king

PG — one of the more Bunusual companies on the stock market — was yesterday unabashed by them across the globe. The reporting a 1995 loss of company, which gets its inventions from universities. £20.7 million for its first year as a quoted public company.

group a £7.2 million profit last

It creates patents for new technologies and licenses government-funded research establishments and compa-It has patents on 1,300 inventions— possibly the best known being the Magnetic view and had warned new in-

Chief executive lan Harvey Kathoke were keen to stress the progress made in creating value from the portfolio of key technologies.

They highlighted the launch by Zeneca of the anticancer drug Tomudex; the continuing development of

Resonance Imaging body | vestors that revenues from | the Torotrak infinitely vari- | concentrating instead on in-scanner which made the | patents on Pyrethrin, a crop | able car transmission system, | creasing the payoff from exwhich included an agreement with Toyota; the licensing for daily disposable contact lens > portfolio. Since it had so many pat-ents on its books, it had become more selective in adding to its portfolio and was company's pharmaceutical

But since it can take many years before inventions yield technology to Bausch & significant income the group Lomb; and the progress is still looking for promising through clinical trials of the new ideas and could not resist taking on 104 new inventions in the past year. Potential winners in its stable include a new form of hip implant and a turbulence control device for ship hulls.

Accountants attack law that can bankrupt them

Roger Cowe

HE accountancy pro fession yesterday launched a campaign to change the law on professional liability to escape the risk of individual partners' bersonal bankruptcy in multi-million-pound negligence actions.

The Institute of Directors, the London Investment Banking Association and the National Associa-tion of Pension Funds joined the leading accountancy bodies, actuaries and professionals from the building industry in a 15strong group urging the Government look into joint and several liability.

led the English chartered accountants' professional liability campaign, said: "The fact that so many and so diverse a group of influ-

REE our spirits and give Britain a boost, said the

tion and its sister the Gin &

Vodka Association of Great Britain this week. Well, okay, what they actually said was that the Government should reduce the tax on spirits in the next budget.

This is a long-running cam-paign, which was energised

last year when the Chancellor took the rare step of slicing

The basic point of the lob-bying is that the industry believes the UK taxes its spirits too highly. This makes it tricky for the UK to urge other countries to reduce their own taxes or to remove the 400 trade barriers that hamper the worldwide export

The industry's traditional markets of the UK, US and parts of Europe are flat, even in decline, and prices are

The answer is to export more whisky, gin and vodka to countries where they are not natural tipples. In many cases, the market is there and waiting to be exploited since the countries already con-sume large quantities of local liquor. It is, anticipates the industry, possible to persuade Latin America. In both Poland and Russia, for instance, the average annual consumption of domestic of spirits.

4 per cent off tax on spirits.

Scotch Whisky Associa-

In addition to the principle of joint and several losses regardless of the scale of their negligence. "Proportionality" has been introduced in the US, is fundamental to European Union law and is being adopted in Commonwealth countries.

The campaign has been sparked by the rising tide of multi-million pound negligence claims against ac-countancy firms and other professional parinerships.
The scale of claims, most of which are settled out of court, has led to insurers withdrawing from the mar- mission concluded there ket for professional indemnity cover, leaving firms highly exposed.

Partnerships are particu-larly vulnerable because ential bodies should come all partners are jointly liatogether in this way speaks ble for the negligence of volumes about the severity any one of them, which cial life".

Drinks lobby steps up

OUTLOOK/ Markets in Eastern Europe,

the Far East and Latin America will open up, claims the alchohol industry, if UK cuts taxes on booze now. Pauline Springett reports campaign to free spirit

The Scotch Whisky Associ-ation argues that Scotch is becoming increasingly sought after as a status drink. Once the basic Scotch becomes established for the masses, it ar-brands become fashionable.

gues, more mature, expensive

It is not just the spirits in-dustry which is lobbying for lower taxation. The Brewers and Licensed Retailers

Association publishes a renort today, claiming chear

beer smuggled across the Channel costs every pub in the country £3,000 a year in

The brewers estimate that more than 1.1 million pints a day were sold illegally in this country last year after having been bought in France. French rates of excise duty are about 4p a pint compared to the UK rate of over 30p. Robin Simpson, director of the association, said: "The solution to this problem, which is threatening pubs and en-couraging crime, is to cut the

Over the summer, in the run-up to the next Budget,

Whisky galore

beer tax in Britain now.'

of the current situation and means that any partner in a the urgency with which firm can be bankrupted if a huge negligence claim is huge negligence claim is

Some firms have decided liability, they want to end to convert to limited com-the position where firms panies, while the States of can be sued for massive Jersey has published a law which will allow firms to register there as limited liability partnerships.

> others want the mainland law changed. In their letter to the trade and industry secretary, Ian Lang, they say: "We all share one overconviction that the present regime is not only unfair but also damaging to economic efficiency."

In an initial review earlier this year, the Law Comwaa no le eal case for a full inquiry. But Gerry Acher chartered accountants' audit faculty, said the traditional principles were from all parts of the industry.

ment is that, however cogent

the industry's arguments, it will doubtless be anxious to avoid outraging the anti-alcohol lobby.

There is also the argument that although the economy may benefit from alcohol sales in terms of jobs and tax revenue, it also has to pay for the social and health prob-lems caused by alcohol abuse.

In the same vein it is also potentially awkward for the Government to be an over-enthusiastic champion of say, Scotch whisky, to developing countries.

The spirits industry has thought of all this. At this week's seminar for MPs, Mar-tin Riley, a brand manager at drinks group Allied Domeco, argued that the UK industry could actually improve, for instance, the problem of alco-hol abuse in Russia.

He reasoned this was be-cause the consumption of imported spirits is changing the way Russians drink - they are discovering the delights of sipping a long gin and tonic in a bar instead of swigging a neat bottle of vodka on the back seat of a car.

To which one listener responded. "I suppose you'd prove to me the world is flat."

News in brief

Burford seeks £141m for further growth

THE Burford Holdings property group asked shareholders for £141.7 million yesterday to finance further growth. A two-for-five rights issue at 122p a starre was accompanied by the acquisition of a portfolio of seven properties from Shell Pensions Trust for £70.8 million and will leave the group room in its balance sheet to spend a further $288 million on property acquisitions.

Nigel Wray, Burford's chairman, said the issue would enable the group to pursue new opportunities. The group, which last hit the headlines when it demerged its Trocadero entertainment operation in the heart of London, sald the properties it was buying were let principally to retail and hotel groups and would provide an annual rental income of $4.9 million — rising to $6.9 million over the next few

Names set to back rescue

NAMES at Lloyd's of London are poised to give the insurance market's £3.1 billion rescue package their overwhelming support according to a survey conducted by market research group Mort.

Of the 500 Names questioned, 79 per cent said they now planned to support the deal, which has recently been increased from its original level of £2.8 billion.

A Lloyd's spokesman said the market regularly carried out such surveys. He added that support for the plan was growing among the Names — last November only 58 per cent had been in favour. Next month, the Names are due to receive updated individual statements on the deal. — Pauline Springett

GEC in US link-up

GEC has joined forces with the US acrospace group Hughes in an attempt to win a £650 million missile order from the RAF. GEC will act as sub-contractor, assembling American cruise missiles for Tornado bombers. The deal would give GEC about 10 per cent of the total value of the order.

The company originally submitted its own product for the Conventionally Armed Stand-off Missile order. The company faces competition from several other groups, including British Aerospace. The Ministry of Defence is likely to announce its

Asda pumps up petrol war

ASDA escalated the petrol price war yesterday by announcing that it will sell petrol at cost price from tomorrow at its 10 hypermarkets. Marketing director Gwyn Burr said: "Our intention is to put an end to the extravagant claims and deliver honest value and low prices."

The "profit-free" policy will mean a reduction of about 1p per litre, with the price of unleaded petrol falling to 50.9p at the eight English sites and 49.9p at Edinburgh and Govan. — Roger Coure

MPs decide freight line fate

THE fate of a £3 billion, 200-mile rail freight line project between the Midlands and the Channel Tunnel is to be left to a decision by Parliament, rail minister John Watts announced yesterday. The line has been heavily criticised by Tory MPs and local authorities, and the Government believes it has found a neat way to squash

One of the most controverstal propositions is for a six-mile turnel to be built between Olympia, cutting straight through central London to Streatham. Other sections would also have to be built beside existing track. Labour has opposed the project and, in the unlikely event of Parliament approving the scheme, it would have to face a difficult, local public inquiry. — Keith Harper

Pep ban appeal

SCOTTISH Amicable is to appeal against the taxman's ban on its new-style Personal Equity Plan, which attempted to shelter investments of up to $50,000 from tax — rather than the $5,000 maximum allowed by the Inland Revenue. The company claims that the Revenue had given its Pep the green light, before it was launched at the beginning of the month, and claims that to outlaw it retrospectively means hundreds of investors who have cashed it retrospectively means hundreds of investors who have cashed n other investments will lose out.

The Pep allowed investments of between £10,000 to £50,000 to be sheltered via the ordinary shares of Amicable Strategy Pep, a split capital trust. Shares worth £6,000 could be held in the Pep, but these would own the income and capital growth of other shares and warrants held outside the Pep. — Teresa Hunter

New food group chief

DAVID NEWTON is to be replaced after three years as chief executive of food group Hillsdown Holdings by former Mars executive George Greener, who takes over on July 1. Mr Greener was until recently chief executive of BAT's financial services operations, after joining from Mars in 1991. — Roger Cowe

Toyota profits accelerate

Kevin Rafferty

OYOTA, Japan's giant motorcar producer. showed its power yes-terday when it announced worldwide pre-tax profits of 420 billion yen (£2.63 billion) on sales that were slightly lower at 10,719 bil-

The big profits were a tribute to Toyota's determined cost cutting, and the ting and the yen," said vice tod worldwide, and will company forecasts even chairman Masami Iwasaki, gain even more from havtter times ahead, predicting that the profits of the parent will rise by 40 per cent this year as the economy picks up.

The results are not directly comparable with the yen was hurting Japanese previous year because Toy- exports.

ota changed its accounting period to end its financial

But the carmaker said that the pre-tax profit for the year that ended in March was equivalent to a 14.8 per cent rise on a full year basis whereas sales dipped by 1 per cent. The still better performance for the current year clearly relieved that the Japanese currency has softened to 107 against the US dollar, compared with a high of 80 reached in April last year when the soaring thing. Enda Clarke of Dresdner Kleinwort Benson said yesterday that "the momentum will start to build up in the second half' as the economy improves and Toyota sees the benefit of the softening yen. Toyota was the founder of the "lean and mean" production system now adop-ted worldwide, and will

Most analysts believe that Toyota's predictions are conservative if any-

Nevertheless, conserva tive Toyota act a shock nese domestic market slipped last year to 39 per cent, below the magic 40 per cent

Childrens World lives on

TOREHOUSE, the BhS and Mothercare group, has had second thoughts about abandoning the name of Childrens World, the outof town store chain it bought from Boots in February.

But the chain's Nottingham head office will be closed by the end of September, as announced at the time of the ac-quisition, with the loss of 130 jobs. Staff are being interviewed this week and next. Many will transfer to other Storehouse operations or back to Boots, but Storehouse said yesterday that there would be some redundancies.

A small number of stores will also be closed, where suitable for the Mothercare they are too near Mothercare outlets.

The integration of Childrens World is expected to cost about £17 million. Storehouse chief executive Keith Edelman said yesterday it was unlikely that the 58 Childrens World stores would simply be relabelled as Mothercare. A combination of the two names is one option being considered, as Storehouse executives assess the stores of which they finally took control last Friday.

He said the Mothercare approach "would be central to the trading strategy" of the acquired chain, but many Childrens World stores are in out-of-town format.

Mothercare chief executive a lot to learn about the out-of-tax profit of £110 million, an increase of just over a fifth despite disappointing sales last year. Sales edged ahead to £1,084 million despite the opening of 10 new BhS stores and nine new Mothercare shops.

Mr Edelman said that BhS sales had been held back be-cause the chain was concentrating on avoiding surplus stocks, but he promised acquired chain, but many greater emphasis on pushing Childrens World stores are in poor sites and may not be sacrificing profit margins.

NOTICE TO CLYDESDALE BANK ACCESS ACCOUNTHOLDERS

Clydesdale Bank PLC announces that the interest rate charged to its personal ACCESS ACCOUNTHOLDERS will be reduced to 1.65% per month for both Advances and other transactions with effect from 1st June 1996. From 1st June 1996 interest and charges are equivalent to an Annual Percentage Rate (APR) as stated in the examples below.

CREDIT LIMIT	APR	CREDIT LIMIT	APR
£500	24.1%	£1,500	22.5%
£750	23.3%	£2,000	22.3%
£1,000	22.9%	£3,000	22.1%

Condition 5 (c) and (d) of the Conditions of Use will be amended accordingly with effect from 1st June 1996.

C∉ Clydesdale Bank

such countries that British imported spirits are "aspirational" drinks. The big opportunity markets for UK spirits are Eastern Europe, the Far East, and EU (excluding UK) 37.42 vodka per person (including infants and the very old) is 12 bottles. In South Korea, 21 bottles of spirits are con-sumed per head each year.

diam Friday May 24 126

Racing

George Bull can break the ice for Hem

Pontefract tonight

31059-0FT0046 0PB( (328) No. 7 Remains 4-5 ...
2310-0 EMBAR THE RILES (249) (C) (C) Nrs M Remains 4-5 ...
2310-0 EMBAR THE RILES (249) (C) (C) Nrs M Remain 42130-RAASED (330) F Waters 4-5 ...
25-5T0ME CHOOSE (249) R Fibrer 4-5 ...
1524-0 IANUARY PETTU. (1) P Every 4-5 ...
4-500-BURL DANCER (22) (C) 6 Minor 4-5 ...
45500-BUYAL COMEDIAN (213) B Marray 7-5 ...
45500-BUYAL COMEDIAN (213) B Marray 7-5 ...
40500-BUYAL COMEDIAN (213) D Den Barbo Instan 107-003 BRAMBLES WAY (14) W Sarbor 7-5-5

TOP FORM TIPS: During Closer S. Hardsday ISS 7, Gold Deale S

314 EXIT TO BIO (9) May J Remotion 9-1 11 MECHYD-DAR (196) M Bed 9-1 21 MECHYD-BAR (196) M Bed 9-1 21 RECORDERTE (149) M Channon 9-1 31 BUDDE AWARDSHARD (289) (2) G L perts 9-1 4729 POOT BARTZALDON (9) (7) R Hoffice hand & 31 MARATRON MADD (9) R Falley 9-10

CONTINUENT CONTINUENT

Betting: 3-1 Samera, 7-2 Victory Boasti, 4-1 Smarter Charter, 9-2 Denoing Image, 6-1 Philister, 10-1 Absolute Ulopta, 12-1 Gool Lee Shay.

Bestflags 4-1 Strategic Play; 9-2 Lord Haade, 5-1 Admirals Secret, 5-1 Sacintees, 7-1 Releast, 6-1 Sobe Up 10-1 Talu.

"I Facelity 10 S D Williams 9 M Paulon 4

1995; Shinarella 9 1 K, Fallon 10-11 (Aire J Remodes) 8 :500

255 BECK MIGCOY MESIORIAL WARDICAF 1m 47 CL, 468
1 22004- SORA UP (2004) (2) T Etherlegton 8-9-13
2 16-006 TURUJ (17) May J Randeds 6-9-13
3 55:59- REDETELLA (244)) R Withhirt 7-9-11
6 64-5124 LONEN RASTIE (10) (10) C TROTTES 8-9-11
8 002/00- REMINE (2017) (3) R Alectors 7-9-11
9 003-30 ADMERIALS SECRET (30) (CD) (EP) CWIJ 7-9-6
9 (116-8) SLAFY OMM (27) (0) J Marchy 4-9-3
101251 BACKWINN (12) (0) B Livershy 4-9-3
101252 SAGE (10) MAY D P Hording 4-9-13
10-05-30 HOTSPARS STREET (13) M W Emischy 4-9-3
4 45-50 JURNON REM (247) (2) (3) State 90 (3) May J Rondens STREET (14) M W Emischy 4-9-3
10-05-31 STRATIBUSE PLOY (3) (30 eq) (0) May J Rondens STREET (10) M P J R J RONDENS STREET (10) M P J R J R J R J R J R J R

B-0 GOLDWILL (14) Miss S Holl B-0

885 LOOK WHOPE CALLENG (18) B McMahon B-0

3-24 MUTADAMINA (20) R Armstrong B-0

0-PRESENT N COMPERCY (28) C Boom B-0

0-06 STONINY BED (6) M Changon B-0

CS-0 WHE MOPE (29) M Stonib B-0

0 AMERICANEL (14) J O'Shee B-0

0 DESERT'S SCHEMER (21) M Bob B-0

D ET THE HOMELANDS (18) D Copyros B-0

OLD ROBEL JOHN BOTY B-1

PETABRAN MISS J CRASS B-0

D ROCKY STREAMS (20) R WARRINGS S-2

Bettings 4-1 Dening Clover, 9-2 Hawksley Hill, 6-1 Hanolboth, 13-2 Manadata, 7-1 Escayelbee, 6-1 Calder King, Gold Denne.

100% Returned 4 B 7 K Police 9-1 (J A Harris) 12 rae

Derby value would be hit by supplementary entry

Chris Hawkins

HERE were 23 accep tors at yesterday's for-feit stage for the Vo-dafone Epsom Oaks to be run on Friday, June 7, but the door remains open for a supplementary entry at a cost of £15,000 eight days before

There will be at least one of these as Henry Cecil has ex-pressed his intention to sup-plement Magnificent Style, his impressive Musidora Stakes winner.
No such supplementary exists for the Derby, of course, and if owners have not entered their colts either as yearlings or at the late entry stage in April, costing £8,000, they must sit and suffer on the day as a possibly inferior animal wins and instantly becomes worth a fortune.

That at least used to be the case. But although it might be good to talk telephone numbers any mega-valuation of the Derby winner becomes hard to justify if several bet-

ing their heels in their boxes. With the internationalisa-tion of racing and so many alternatives available, the Derby, although the richest race in Europe, is approach-ing the stage when it is no longer regarded as the su-preme and unmissable test for three-year-olds.

Thus with its prestige and popularity apparently on the wane, the argument for trying to ensure the best possible field grows ever more vocifer-ous, and if this means a suppl-mentary stage or even a wild card entry then so be it. That would seem logical enough, but the reason why

Epsons is able to maintain the value of the Derby is because of the initial £250 entry stage for yearlings. There were, for instance, 620 yearling entries for this year's race, which netted £155,000. Owners then pay succes sive additional amount totalling £4,750 to have a runner. The argument against a supplementary entry, no matter how high the cost, is that hard to justify if several bet-ter colts are known to be kick-initial yearling entry.

Cecil . . . late Oaks entry owners with bottomless pock-ets to simply sit back and then weigh in at the last moment when it became clear where their strength lay.

One way the value of the race could be maintained whatever the method of entry would be if the Levy Board compared for instance, to the £32,760 which goes towards the Ascot Gold Cup and owners are being blatantly exploited in the amount they are expected to put up for major races. If there are 25 runners in this year's Derby the total value of the race will be £889,750, of which owners will put up £49,750.

Edward Gillespie, the offi-cial in charge of this year's Derby, commented: "Owners contribute proportionately more to the Derby than any other race although it is BHB's general policy is to try and get owners' contributions

"We are in a dilemma over the Derby because we want to maintain its value and to do this the yearling entry is ab-solutely vital. Epsom, Vodafone and the Levy Board are contributing £400,000, but the Levy Board's share could hardly be called a princely

"The whole matter of types of entry and whether the race contributed considerably remains on a Saturday will be more than its current £11,610. discussed fully next month."

take some beating. That was her first run for

MISSDE MAIDEN AUCTION STAKES 270 M CASO!

TOP FORE TIPE: Joint Vanhers 8, Contental 7, Aghangiri 8 1990: Recultiri Salled 7 12 A McGispe 4-5 (S W Hills) 12 per

Haydock with form

Podes Crease — A YEMBOSTAL Last III over 11 cml, no chance with winner, 2nd of 8, 2 Shorethy Strate Aust Alba gh JOSHT YEMTLANDS 56 for Led most headed Last Strate, 2nd of 4, shind behind Wast For castle () mon auct gd)

23	30 SPILAL BLJURISS ASSOCIATION APPRINTICES! HANGICA	P 270 of £3,111
201	22.000 MONTRESTAR (10) P Evnes 8-7	Angele Colleges
		3
302	254-G4) MARJORIE ROSE (16) A Bailey 8-5
203	0-12011 MAITEANNA (22) (D) 5 Bowrag 9-5	G Millione 84
254	06-6 FAJEDA SECONDA (29) J Speanog 9-2	S Righton (3) 13
200	212500 BGFFY (41) (CD) B Baugh 5-13	P Roberts 12
206	420-414 LIMERICK PRINCESS (14) (D) J Berry 6-12	Journe Webster
		14
267	329-040 SHARP NONTY (45) R Kall mahead 8-11	Il Humphries 2
208	00-54 LAPU-LAPU (25) H Comecto 5-8	S Copp 5
200	PSID-G3 PATHAZE (18) N Bycroft 8-6	Je Human (3) 7
210	4000-05 DOUG'S FOLLY (18) of W Easterty 8-3
211	06-5052 MADAM ZAMDO (18) J Bolding 8-0	Martin Deyer 4
212	12190) 1865 OFFSET (4) (D) M Johnston 8-0	K Shed (5) 64
213	650-00 RONYTHRUC BALL (18) T Warson 7-12	C Adamson 11
214	15900-5 TAUREAR FIRE (16) Mrs 13 Reveloy 7-11	P Doe (5) 1
215	450UC-0 MAYSBIP (24) 8 Baugh 7-10	P Cherke (5) 18
216	000- BABYSHOOZ (339) M String 1-10	رة) الشيطية في <sub>الس</sub> يد
TOP	PORMI TIPS: Maltannia S, Pathere 7, Limerick Princess S

1985: Sheeney J 9 C Tonges 4-f (L W Watte) 14 cm Butthey 4-1 Magnatrus, 5-1 Madem Zardo 8-1 Montroner, Limerick Princess, 10-1 Féricle 1 Patrazo, Doug's Folis

3,0	PQI GERMALLE PROPERTY HAMDICAP 1th Style Ca,542
301	20-6636 SAND ON THE SUN (0) (C) (D) B McVahon (-19-0
302	5/65-300 RABBAROJA (17) (D) J Fiz-Gerak 5-0-8 Par Eddary 8
304	013-340 SHIMEROLLA (34) (2) C Parker 4-3-5 J Carroll 1
304	130-000 MP St FLAMES (20) (CD) M Hammard 5-6-(1
305	05-6001 REVERAND THICKNESS (41) (0) A Balley 5-8-10 K Darley 4
206	3220-04 MORDEC BREEZE (12) A Saley 4-8-9
307	035-110 TATHKA (17) (U) G Wragg 5-8-7
208	431144 HIGH PREMINING (201) (D) R Fahry 1-8-7
306	945343 @ FACTOR (41) D Happin James 4-8-3
310	320002 PUKE VALIENTING (14) (II) R Hallingheas 4-8-9P Facety (5) 10
311	312-522 BOLLIN FRANK (18) (CD) T Easterby 4-8-0 Characte S
TOP	OWN TIPS: Band On The Rea S, Severand Telebrase 7, High Premium S
1995	the la Plantas 4 & 5 J Carrell 18-1 (M Haramanni) 11 yeu
Sec.	up 7-2 Band On The Run, 5-1 High Protitium, 7-1 Solin Frank, 5-7 Lip in Flames, Reversed Thicks
Duke !	Valentino.

six weeks and she kept on well to suggest that she will be well suited by today's Dute Vaterone.

PORM GRIPP:—BARD ON THE SUPE Tracked leaders, hard drives over 11 out, not page to challenge, 6th of 15. It bothor first leaded (York 1m hop gi) and inside fleat know, 4th of 16. If beaind New Century (Tointh 1st hop gi) IN FLANES. Never before than mid-division, 10th (pin 14).

BOLLIM PRANES: Chessed leaders, led over 15 out, no extra lowards limits, 2nd of 16, 11 bethied Courter (Bowerley intoly not gi).

BOLLIM PRANES: Chessed leaders, led over 3 out, headed inside last, led near finest, wen Warwell in drive, beauting JARC Cyrano by 15, 14 ray.

BOLLIM PRANES: DRY 15, 14 ray.

BOLKS WALTERTINGS Haid up, ridden 2f out, unable to queblan, 2nd of 9. We behind Society Tern (Lingfield Im beauting). extra quarter of a mile. Lynda Ramsden's stable has hit form and the time

3.3	O COAL PRODUCTS GROUP RATED MANDRIAN 3YO 1 OF C4,864	•
100	15-15 BENATON (16) H Cool 9-7 Par Elicity 7
SÕE .	G-1 DESC OF GOLD (84) M Johnston 6-7
100	6-12 DEFAMOUS (34) (BF) P Cole 9-6
104	01-0 OVERRULED (18) (NF) D Loder 9-6 L Detter! 3
105	752-21 SHARAF (36) J Durlop 9-5
106	023-3 ARCTIC FARCY (90) P Harms 9-2
107	506-24 SELIATOR (16) G Balding 8-7 S Sanders 1
	Min TIPS: Shoret B. Sensium 7 led Seatmen S C & M Reberts 6-4 (A Stemant) 4 ran
	Bull Information 7-2 Street A. Is Statistics, S2 Stemplem J1 Communical S1 Nice Colleges 15-1	1

	ARCTIC FAMILY'S TRESKIC HALDRY, ARCY 3 OUT, May no on, 3rg of 15, 38 behind Sings   Play (THINK 1 site gd).
	4.00 WY INSURANCE MOKENS SELLING STAKES 2YO M 22,200
	801 302312 O-MAJRRY (3) R Hollinghedd 8-2
,	$62 21 COME TOO MANUA (11) (D) J Berry 5-11 J Contail 4
	SOC THE POUR BLES D Havis Jones 8-11
-	$704 STOTLEY PRINCESS N Bycock 8-6 L Charact. 6
	SOR VIVORA Merrys Mende 8-6
	TOP FORM TEPS: Come Too Minning's 10, C-Harry 7
	1986: Laur Met 28 & V Shitery 5-1 (Shrtyn Mende) & res
	Bettings 7-4 Come Too Mamma's, 9-4 C-Harry, 4-1 Sunve Star, 6-1 The Four Inles, 16-1 Viro

FORMS GUIDDS - COMES TOO MAMMATS Tracked beden: led if out, nidden oot, wan Societeell Steel [ANT] and beating firm Lucy from $2.9 tab.

C-MANNET: Ellor over 11 out, zoon nidden and kept on some pace, 2nd of 8, 159 behind Styers Payer (Generally 25 and gh.)

01	35 BERTHICE (10) Q Wrags 8-11
82	2-43 062420SA (263 H Candy 8-11	R Cochratte 7
8	0-0 CULDORAN SOUND (200) T Eastering	5-11 T Williams 6
04	HERDWINATER M Johnston 8-11	J Weaver 2
05	MARINO CASSIO H Carl 8-11	Pat Eddery 4
06	3-4 MERREL (12) P Chemie-Hyam 8-1	1Paul Ballery 1
OT	5-3 MINOTCHIKA (28) J Dunlop 8-11
P FO	CENTIFIC Coverses 8, Harling 7
M6: 1	top Shop 8 11 W Rynn 30-100 ()  Cool) 6 p
	7-4 Marino Castes, 3-1 Generola, 6-2 Serenio Sound.	ı, S-1 Mertbel, S-1 Ninotorica, 7-1 Herpmunter 7 mm

	-
5.0	O EICKERHAW C	OIEDITIONS STAKES	71 50pds 25,000
1	2285-15 FIRE DOM	E (27) R Hannon 4-8-	8	Mille 1
1 2	2214-12 TARKATA	100 (58) (CD) Seed	bin Surcor 4-5-4	Detter 4
1 2
l š			plo Hyram 3-8-2
	ORE THE Takketon
1985	March Cat 5 9 10 W	Ryon 15-6 (5 Week	d) 5 (No.
1 2 4 5 TOP 2	2265-15 FINE DOM 2214-12 TARKATA 2521- KUSSED, (2 01 MASTER B 3-10 WHEER CR	E (27) R. Hannon 4-8- Mil (38) (CD) Seed 87) A. Harrison 4-8-15 KOUTS (30) (D) D. Lod KCLE (33) (D) P. Chap au 8, Fire Desie 7	8 bin Surcor 4-9-4 er 3-8-7 pio Hyan 3-8-2	Detted 4 J Stack (3) 5 Put Eddary 3

to action at Goodwood yesterday after his 10-day suspen-sion with an 11-1 double on Taipan and North Song.

2.10 (6f): 1, NAKSD POSSE, Dane O'Nefti (4-1); 2, Nathala Bay (13-6 fav); 3, Wash For Basis (5-1), 5 ran Hd, 1, (P Hannon) Tote; EASC 11, 80, 11, 30, Dual Forcast 12.40, CSF: E10.23, NR: Reunion.

#4.10 (61): 1, ORTOLAN, Dane O'Nelli (15-8 lav); 2, Lional Edwards (13-2): 3, Red Thee (20-1) 10 ren. Sh hd, 18 rR Harmon) Tota: 22.40; 12.10, £1.60, £3.60. Oual Forcast 18.60. Trio: £40 80 CSF: £13.06. NN: Beeny.

£13.09. NR: Beeny,
4.45 (1 in 12): 1, NORTH SONG, L Detor!
(13-5 fint): 3, Th Assan (9-2): 3, Dramadle
Moment (12-1), 7 ran, 25, E. (J Gosdan)
Total: £2.40; £1.50, £2.10. Dual Forcest: £5.40.
Tric: £2.340; £1.50, £2.10. NR Regime of Glory, Rocky Caste.
5.350 Abandoned due to hearty fog. JACKPOT: $10,574.80. Pool of $10,425.88 carried over to Haydock loday. PLACEPOT: $181.60. QUADPOT: $254.20. 0930 168+ MAH'TTON

TOWCESTER 105 205

FULL RESULTS SERVICE 168

PONTEFRACT

2.26 (1m 27): 1, SASURU, Paul Eddery (16-8/sv); 2, Guestonia (5-2); 3, Albamara (7-1), 14 ran. E. 6 (3 Wragg) Tote: C3-0 C1-40, E1.50, C2.10. Dual Forcast: £5.10. Trio:

winner when hitting the a question of George Bull. Nottingbam controverfront three out at Kempton

Nottingham runners and riders

nck 4-0-7 ...

is well used to the frustra-tions of the job, but even he must be finding it hard to cope with the disappointment of his season so far, writes Chris Hawkins. Biggest let down has been Alhaarth, who has failed to come up to expeciations after looking as if he could be another Nashwan, but apart from that Hern is still looking for his first winner. The wait should end at dropped back to ten fur-Nottingham this afternoon longs this afternoon.

2.20 ARMOLD SELUNG HANDICAF 1m 17 212/m 62,670

56,-03 BOBARLY (22) (9) J Webreright 4-9-2
505-26 BY MANDROOM PRINCS (18) P Beven 4-9
14/4-03 COMEDY RIVER (14) (5) R Berry 9-9-3
11000 MAZRLA (11) A Streeter 4-9-9
11000 MAZRLA (11) A Streeter 4-9-9
60005 SPEEDY SRAPP PRINC (28) P Condent 4-8
60005 SPEEDY SRAPP PRINC (28) P Condent 4-8
60000 SPEED READY SRAPP PRINC (28) (5) L RIVER 7-9-11
60200 NO SPEED PARK (5) (5) J J RIVER 7-9-11
60200 NO SPEED PARK (5) (5) J D CREEMIN 19-9-1
500000 MARTERIT NOV (20) (6) EQ D CREEMIN 19-9-1
600000 MARTERIT NOV (20) (9) K LURENDER 4-8-8
6000000 SREEMING PRINC (287) R HORSE 5-9-7
600-00 SREEMING PRINC (277) Pp MARTER 4-8-7
600-00 SREEMING PRINC (277) Pp MARTER 4-8-7
600-00 SREEMING PRINC (277) Pp MARTER 4-8-7

TOP FOREIT TIPE: Misconramin S, Aurosesse Pouter 7, Caready Ricer & 1990: Indian Jackey S & O A Markey 6-4 (P Mothile) 23 sm. Betting 6-1 Assenze Poute, 10-1 Scotlab Park, Cornedy Niver, 12-1 Bokes Marroremin.

DE RADCLEPS LIBETTED STAKUS of 15yes (2,30)

20102 CRESTAR GRF (45) (DN ILLIMOSIS 5-9-7

SOTTES HARMANFE USINES (123) (DT C Murray 4-9-7

D-2002 BABANTO (149) (D) (RF) Mrz J Parmone 5-9-4

SO2025 HAZMONY BLUE (200) K Marges 5-9-4

SO2030 REPLISATE AND EXPLIP E Reymen 4-9-4

201-201 ROULEBER (153) (D) Pri Mitchell 6-9-4

- 30401 PRITINACO (4) (D) N SMITH 8-9-4

- 30401 PRITINACO (4) (D) N SMITH 8-9-4

- 19-504 WILL PALM (7) (C) W (7) Commar 4-8-4

50-6050 REPRISE LE BOW (15) Pri Mitchell 4-9-1

APGE_JACKSON P Debos 5-11
43 DARGHELL PRINCESS (16) (BP) R Hollenhard 9-11
55 DOM:VALL (16) (275ms 5-11
FERMANDA J Deslop 5-11

TOP FORM THE: Decalit Princers S, Endy # 7

20 ARRIGUE SELING MARRICON 1st 12 12 12 46 C2,670
28000-0 MARRIDON (11) W Clay 5-(1)-0
0000-3 MARRIDON (11) W Clay 5-(1)-0
0571-03 SHIS SAID NO (50) (0) Lord Husingsion 4-10
0571-03 SHIS SAID NO (50) (0) Lord Husingsion 4-10
104-00 OURSINS STRUCKLER (88) T WES 5-3-4
116-05 SPITTHER EMINOR (57) (0) M INCOMMAC 4-0-7
105-00 TOWY'S HEST CESP (C) J Bradwy 4-3-4
1030-00 PRIMI LASS (7) Mint J Brows 5-3-4
12-001 AWASCHERA (672) (0) J Mg 11-9-3
12-001 ARRICONNAM (672) (0) J Mg 11-9-3
12000-3 MARRIDON CROWN (672) (0) Marrin Ware 5-0-2
260-00 DAMANUS CROWN (672) (0) J Mg 11-9-3

2.20 Scottish Park (ph 2.50 Bursto recently, but faded to finish third to Roisin Clover. It is debatable whether he was in front too long or simply did not to stay the mile and a half. Stable opinion seems to favour the latter explanation as he is sially decided to discontinue jump racing at the track and put all their eggs in the Flat basket. Judging by the size of the fields there today the decision is soundly based and the raccompetitive.

and the rac-certainly trating Barato (2.5) to get his head in front in the Rad-There are 23 runners in cliffe Limited Handicap.

ı	3,5	O OPTION CLASS LEGAL EXPENSE PROTECTION HANDICAP IN	1f 218yds C3,88
	1	0-50-6 DESERT SPHING (180 P Harris 4-10-0	B Henry (S) 5
	2	(VIXI)25- VIXIA PRESENTAL (200) M Torrolons 4-9-12	Problemen 3
		00090-3 ORONGE SEEL (245) W Horn 4-0-8	T Speake 4
1	4	650-104 SCOTTISH BARRY (14) (D) P Webber 5-9-7
۱		000 SQUARED AWAY (17) J Payne 4-9-1
	ă		_G Burdenii 15
ı	7	4-10560 OLE TOM (900 J Wharton 4-9-0	K Fallen I
1	8		J Orden 12
٠l	•	30263-3 MAETER M-E-H (17) N Babbage 4-8-9	_A Charle 6
Į	16	003012 ZAKRAN (4) J Bradley 5-7-13
ł	11		-H Kennedy 12
ì	13	00/0-035 BROKEE MAGNETYE (14) (D) THIRD 6-7-10
1	13		Date Cheen 11
ı	14		R Belley (7) 14
ı	46	Mr. All Address very Navigation and March Contract Marine 1. 7. 41	M Wardow (19) W

TOP POSSI TIPS: Gaurge Stall S. Mander 18-6-2 7, Zalesso S.

SHOOTING LIGHT (15) M Jarry 9-7 P Bloomfail 1 SLA-755-8001 (17) (IEF) L Combit 9-1 Philippins 4 MIRTAN (28) J Durlop 9-1 RIBLE 8
MINTAIN (28) J Dunton 9-1
MACHENERES (P2) P Cole 8-12T Quine 2
DANCHIG CAYALIER (46) R Hollospind 8-11 D Geffice (8)
DOCTOR GREEN (ET) Lord Husbroom B-10
MARRIET HOUSE (20) C Croer 8-0 herricance percent (12) (b) C Bretain 7-10 200

		-,
1	3-02245 BACKHAMDER (27) Martyn Wass 4-8-10	J Edwards &
2	0-000 TARIAN (20) G Baiding 4-9-9	Ji Genies (10) 18
2	(0340)- HANYEST HEAPER (187) J.L. Henris 4-9-2	T Field (5) 17
4	01-0 PRINCE 23236 (10) C Dayer 3-9-6	FTymm (100 18
	56-0 SOCSETY MACIC (22)   Balance 3-9-6	C Scuddor (0) 18
-	45-0 STRAIGHT THINKING (142) P Cole 3-9-2	Devid O'Nall (10) 19
Ť	CSD-60 BROUGHTON'S PRIDE (28) J Byrn 5-8-2	D Summer (2) 10
	03400-3 BAKHETA (7) Mas Gay Kellerary 4-0-6	O Perimer 4
•	(50000- BL DOW (1845) A Ryan 4-8-13	A RicCartily (10) 7*
10	5109- OSCAR ROSE (2006) Lord Huntaggion 3-8-12	/ Wikiness (2) 2
11	00-00 JOHA MOLLEY (22)   Balding 3-8-11	R Mades (5) 3
12	940-890 BAD NEWS (18) J Bradey 4-8-11
13	3633-00 NEED'S CONTESSA (4) M Dods 3-4-5	d Denois 1 to
14	%-000 OFFICHS RANGE (8) N Berry 5-8-4	A Billery 14*
15	1000- SPA LANE (215) P Malm 3-8-4
18	2'00-00 RUSTIC SONQ (42) J Wingrow 3-8-2
17	003-002 NADADABBLE (11) Pst Mitchell 3-8-0	J Mars (E) 45
18	(1) David - 1995 TOFFEE MOSK (459) D Congress 4-7-13
19	8000-05 CLASSIC DAISY (90) R Sport 3-7-11	J Benton (20 a)
20	6-400 YORGED IN THE EXTY (14) A MUNICIPUS 5-7-11	J Francis (T) 8
30 PM	the design of the control of the con

1995: Beat Of Pener 5 7 B W Sangle 33-1 (Wartes Warn) 18 100

 Blinkered today for the first time: NOTTINGHAM: 4.20 Doctor Green; 4.50 El Don, Ned's Contessa, Opening Range, PONTEFRACT: 7.10 Hanbitooh; 7.35 Exit To Rio, BRIGHTON; 3.40 Last Spin; 4.40 Music Mistress, HAYDOCK: 2.00 Joint Venture; 3.00 High Premium. TOWCESTER: 6.50 Born To

Magrif-4 Seva, 2-1 Fernanda, 4-1 Danahiji Princessa, 6-1 Hakksaiyub, 10-1 Ewityliff, 16-1 April Justaen.	Please; 8.20 Icky's Five
Towcester National Hunt ca	rd tonight

15 T Quine 11 P NoCabe (3) 1

6.50 Orehard King	8.20 Beau Dendy
7.20 I Have Mice	8.50 Te4
→ Denotes bilakers, Gring: Good to 1  Claures, in irredute effor herse's one	firm ne distoire days elime hisset HJL seeling
6.20 PRESTORE RANDICAP C
1 31/-ROSS THE WIDGET MAN 6	B30 J Gatord 10-12-0 P Elide
2 102/31-P GELSTON LASS (18)	(D) J King 9-11-8 J R Keranagh R Curita 10-11-8 D Morris
A POPUSO POLAR REGION (11)	) Al Handerson 10-11-4
A 3-25-US WHITHE LORBABILE	(17) (15) Fl Almer 11-11-1 C Uswallyn
8 OPS-FPP ABBOTSHAM (21) O	Carter 11-11-2
7 26-502 FATHER DOWNING	(1.5) (ESF) G Balding 9-10-0 P MyCoy +
$ DEPG AGORDONE COM	STRE (12) (CD) P Principus 11-10-0
No secretionaged uses
	5-1 Pather Dowling, 6-1 Woodleydo Gerbiro, 6-1 White Lorralia
10-1 Gilston Lags.

10 ANTONIO MINICES PROPRIA IN THE POSSIBLE (M) J GRIDOI S-1-(PULL CLASSIC BILAGE (205) (D) N SERVING S-1-7- L-1-7- L-1-7-

7,20 JULIAN HELFANGE HYMORIAL HANDICAP CHANG 2m 110ydii 02,504

ž ·	250012 DR GOCKET (8) (CD) R 1 512231 MOKKS JAY (18) (CD) (	Dicida 11-10-6 G Thomas 7-18-4
	(4.75) (11) (11) (19) (4.75) (CE	3) J R Upman 9-10-0	lt Sup
gamen ØSt Ci	and 7 11 10 E Department 5-1	8 (K & Hall ny) 4 m
-	-i Armata, 4-1   Here Him, Mania	.Jey, 9-4 Sertorius.	S-1 Dr Rockel, Trette.
			_

8.20 WAYENDE HUNTEREY CHARE Annahores 2m. 11 €1,792

1 39.67 - ARCTIC BARDER (1004) Minn M Raymond 11-12-7

2 971-471 BEAU DAMPY (11) (5) Minn C Samedern 9-12-7

2 11-19-7 CHARE MANN (27) N Tweston-Daving 8-12-7

3 12-10-4 FOX POINTER (7) Min L Enters 11-12-7

5 12-10-4 FOX POINTER (7) Min L Enters 11-12-7

2 2071 E MERICEN BARYERY (56) David Prichard 11-12-7

2 2072 HERMERS HARYERY (57) (20) D Williams 8-12-7

2 2073 KINCKURENTIN (11) (30) Sulmy J Solin 13-3-7

10 10267- TOUCH OF WINTER (277) J Porter 10-12-7

17 (70)-7 BAREL (7) Min C Hides 11-12-3

12 FOXF-F BAREL (7) Min C Hides 11-12-3

12 FOXF-F BAREL (10-12-3) Mins P Winter 12-12-3

13 TERREY STATE FIVE (14-64) Mins P Winter 12-12-3

2 TERREY STATE FIVE (14-64) Mins P Winter 12-12-3

2 TERREY PU GOMERNA CAMPETS MANOCLAP HOTOLOGY See C2,93
2-11620 MANUES (227,00) (895) M Tomothan 5-12-0
55552-0 ETD (1.8) this S South 7-11-10
4423) MANUES (41) J GROW 6-11-8
4423) MANUES (41) J GROW 6-11-8
7-4129 OSEPHAN (896) J (801 M INCOMPAN 5-18-17)
FRUSH COMPANIES (18) J ON 12-18-10
315173 MANUES (18) J (801 12-18-10)
315173 MANUES (18) J (801 18-18-10-10)
315173 MANUES (18) J (801 18-18-10-10)
315173 MANUES (18) J (801 18-18-10-10) _P Haber (7) *
_R Good
_P Hide
_A Thorsies
_L Harvies
_L Harvies
_E Resion (2)
_A P McCay
H Harvies

12 resears 1986; Sayb 5-30-3 M A Pitagenid 10-1 (J White) 9 cm Betting: 11-4 Manor Physic. 3-1 Charged, 7-2 Drumcasium, 5-3 Funcheon Gale, 8-1 And Way Not, 12-1 Lo-Flying Mostle, 14-1 Tende.

. .

- 15 115

in the state of t

478 ...

* . . .

• John Murtagh has elected to ride Zafzala in tomorrow's Airlie Coolmore Irish 1,000 Guineas at the Curragh. The Irish champion jockey's mount will be one of three Aga Khanowned fillies in the £150,000 race trained locally by John Oxx. who won the event last year with Ridgewood Pearl. The others are Sheraka (Gerald Mosse) and Asmara (Christy Roche).

Vialli puts Gullit before Glasgow

Martin Thorpe and lan Ross

HELSEA will today confirm one of soccer's worst-kept secrets when they announce the signing of the Italian striker Gianluca Vialli. The 31-year-old player comes fresh from his European Cup triumph with Jutract, a deal that his former employers were unwilling to

It is understood Vialli will earn £1.2 million a season to team up with his friend Ruud Gullit, Chelsea's player-man-ager. It was a straight choice between Chelsea and Rangers, who were believed to have offered £1.8 million to Arsenal but, though he had long phone conversations with the Gunners' midfielder David Platt about such a Nottingham Forest and David Platt about such a Nottingham Forest and David Platt about such a Nottingham Forest and David Platt about 1988 and 198 move, it is understood that Arsenal's manager Bruce

Arsenal's manager Bruce Rioch was against it.
Vialli will bring yet more flamboyance to the increasingly high-profile Stamford Bridge club, though supporters will be interested to see how he fits into a side alongside Marts Husbes a player side Mark Hughes, a player similar to himself.

West Ham have lodged a formal £1 million bid with Galatasaray for Dean Saunders and expect to learn this weekend whether it has been accepted.
The Welsh international forward has almost two years of his contract left but he is anxious to return to England. wages a season.

Vialli, out of contract and thus moving on a free transfer, himself fancied a switch they have told West Ham they international striker, signed for Roma from B sia Mönchengladbach in they have told West Ham they reported £2.5 million fee.

Derby County are also interested in Saunders, who will be 32 next month, and have asked to be kept informed of any development.

Gary Speed may announce this weekend where he intends to play next season. The Leeds midfielder is available at M million and must choose between Everton and Villa, with the Merseyside club favourites to sign him.

Real Madrid and Interna-

zionale have agreed an unspecified fee for the Brazilian full-back Roberto Carlos. The player, who has also been sought by Arsenal, is thinking over the move to Spain.

Martin Dahlin, the Swedish international striker, has

Myth of Ajax exposed

Martin Thorpe says that without all its key parts the Dutch machine broke down in Rome

Juventus lifted the European Cup in Rome on Wednesday night: a myth about the Ajax

It has long been held that this tactical bedrock is all that matters and that when players are injured or suspended others can be slotted into place like spare parts in an engine without any discernible loss of performance.

The final in the Olympic Stadium disproved this theory. As Ajax's captain Danny Blind said: "You can put some other players in but the quality is always less because otherwise they would be in the first XI."

Ajax's uncharacteristic uncertainty at the back, which cost them one goal and nearly several more, was undoubt-edly linked to the defensive reshuffle forced by the sus-pension of Michael Reiziger. Up front Patrick Kluivert's lack of match fitness saw him introduced only at half-time, and with Marc Overmars

"The Widget."

Pat Pending 1956.

PAT Pending was this mad chap in the 50s, who being only a diminutive 4ft.5in., was called the "Widget".

He should not be confused with our "in the bottle Widget" which was

EASY DRINKING

5.5% BY YOLDINE

invented in 1994.

MONG the flares and firecrackers, something else was exploded when the participants to be fully fit if it is to be operated properly. So, with not only Kluivert but the De Boer brothers also just back from injury, the lack of match sharpness cre-ated breakers in the circuit. It was this that the Ajax coach Louis van Gaal seized on in explaining his side's defeat.

"We missed too many players and others were not totally fit so we could not give a good performance," he said. "When you are aware of inju-wherever they went. The Dutch champions' normally ventus deserved their victory. That it came in a penalty shoot-out should not disguise missing because of injury the fact that they created twice as many chances as for Ajax it is in what Van chances.

Ajax struggled to create twice as many chances as for Ajax it is in what Van Gaal also says: "Most of the same Ajax players only work will not undermine their joy

at the victory.
The future for Ajax is another struggle against the pulling power of richer clubs. Though they have qualified for next season's Champions' League as Dutch title winners, they will be without Reiziger and the influential mid-fielder Edgar Davids, who are following countless others in leaving Holland for the lure of the lira. They are joining Milan and in a year's time Kluivert is booked on the same route. Van Gaal denied that the a good performance." he said.

"When you are aware of injuries you know as a coach you are not capable of giving your best. Juventus showed our proud. It is a reflection of the weaknesses on the evening." quality of Ajax players. It is Juventus, as expected, put also a credit to the staff that opponents under pressure despite the loss of so many players in the last five years we are this season champions

Dutch champions' normally slick-passing movements were rarely allowed to develop and, though a fully functioning Ajax machine might well have slipped the handcuffs, this one could not it may sound as though Ajax were unlucky, but Juventus deserved their victory. man from Sparts Rotterdam and the midfielder Richard Witschge, an Ajax product, from Bordeaux.

The Dutch system, with its should have won the game Ajax players only work very different in mind, and as the two countries meet in a World Cup qualifier in best striker in Germany," tional adaptability and mentional tal calculation, requires all best side in Europe, but that never play quite as well."

Jess given chance to impress

Patrick Glenn In Connecticut

ON THE basis that one man's meat is another man's poison, the news yes-terday that Billy McKinlay, the Blackburn midfielder, has joined Ally McCoist on Scotland's casualty list before Sunday's match with the United States had a mixed

For Craig Brown, the manager, it meant another round of head-scratching and card-shuffling. For McKinlay, who should be ready along with McCoist for Wednesday's meeting with Colombia in Miami, there was personal disappointment as opportunities to establish himself before Euro 96 dwindle.

But for Coventry's versatile Eoin Jess and the Rangers striker Gordon Durie, there were reasons to be cheerful. Durie, who scored five goals in his last two club matches - including a hat-trick in the Scottish Cup final - is certain to be given a place in the front line, along with one from Scott Booth, John Spen-cer and Kevin Gallacher.

Jess, whose fortunes have gess, whose fortunes have fluctuated wildly since his $2 million move south from Aberdeen in January, will start Sunday's game at Willowbrook Park, New Britain, in midfield. Jess was a late replacement in the Scotland sound for the injured Paul squad for the injured Paul McStay.

"I know I've come in by the side door." said Jess, who has 10 caps. "It's my ambition now to prove I should have been here in the first place. Jess's reception from English team-mates at High-field Road has also put an edge on his ambition, particu-larly in the matter of Scotland playing England at Wembley in the second of their Group

A series on June 15. "Oh, they just tell me to my face I've come from a fish 'n' chip league where anybody can get a game," he said. "Some players at Coventry have told me if there was a Scottish game live on TV they wouldn't bother to watch. I will bear that in mind come Wembley. "I'm no longer the promising boy. I want to make a proper name for myself."

Germany find perfection in chilly east Belfast

Michael Walker finds Berti Vogts upbeat about his squad's Euro 96 preparation

HEN Berti Vogts in-formed the German FA last November they have good speed and we need this game." V V FA last November that he had chosen "somewhere different" to accli-gen Klinsmann and the rest chilly east Belfast.

Vogts, according to an Irish FA official, had wanted "somewhere like Manchester but not in England", so the Germany manager must have been pleased with the constant threat of rain in Belfast. He should see plenty before the squad leaves next Thursday, having played Northern Ireland in a matise for Euro 96, a few mans as masters of organisation when he said he may have started dreaming of Hawaiian beaches or Northern Ireland team and Spanish golf courses. had not even seen a video of But he had somewhere them. No doubt he will do, have changed our appraisal of the Germany squad ran of the Germans again, for out at the Danny Blanchin Vogts's eyes "this is not flower Stadium here in a typical German team; we have skill".

By defeating Bulgaria 3-1 in their last qualifier Germany finished on top of Group Seven, and at that stage Vogts was optimistic. However, after a long domestic season he is not so sure. "Now I don't know. Last week I watched Bayern Munich and Borussia Dort-mund and all the players looked tired. That's why we watch them train in Germany. Only about 50 jour-nalists and photographers made their way to Blanchflower Park, along with three RUC officers, a guard-dog and a handful of local echoolboys who had bunked off for the morning. They watched Sepp Maier put Kopke, Klos and Kahn through vigorous goalkeeping exercises while Voges oversaw shooting practice in which Kliusmann and Andreas Möller stood out. "For me Klinsmann is the good guy to have around for the team and players."

With Lothar Matthaus now retired from international football, Klinsmann will captain Germany in England, although he will miss the opening game against the Czech Republic on June 9; the centre-forward collected two yellow cards in qualification and is suspended along with the Borussia Dortmund midfielder Steffen Freund. Vogts nevertheless was upbeat about the opening friendly the night before.

"Here is perfect for us," he said. "And the people are very friendly. Next Wednesday is a very important game for us; we like glare of the thousands who interests the case of the could relax away from the grach the quarter-finals a after that we need luck." game. "I hope we can beat the Czechs and the Russia team, though they are very good," he said. "I hope to reach the quarter-finals and

6.30 (2m Helle): 1, SLANCHLAND, C Maude (7-1): 2, Limo Street Bloss (12-1): 5, Br Christie (16-1): 5-2 far Searchight 15 ran. Sh hd, 2, (P fillchens) Tote (5.8): 12-70, 5.170, 55.40, 001 F: 24-50. Tric (138.80, CSF 178.81, NR: The Secret

Seven. 7.00 (Jan Helie): 1, PERCY THROWER, 1 Jenis; (5-1); 2, Stemmtracker (15-8 kty); 1 Jenis; (5-1); 2, Stemmtracker (15-8 kty); 4, Salliredo (4-1); 6 7an. 26. 8 (I Twiston-Davies) Tote 55.20; 51.50, 51.30, 51.20, Dall F: 55.90, Trio: 54.80, CSP: 513.31 Tricast 520.89, NPT Aunite Alice.

Results

INTERNATIONAL MATCH

Golf

CLUB SENIOR PROFESSIONAL CLUS SEMION PROPESSIONAL CHESKIP (Sevenake: Third rounds 213 T Horion (Royal Jersey) 71, 69, 73, 8 Waltes (Note) 72, 72, 69 (Horion won third eatra hole), 216 H Flatman (Romford) 69 72, 75, J Rhodes (South Shafts) 69, 76

Tennis

ATP WORLD TEAM CIP (Duesse, Round-relate Blue groups Cz 2, Rus US 2, Notherlands 1 WORLD'S OPEN (Madrid) Causrier als: A Sepolacy Vicente (Sp) bl A Coc (SA) 6-2, 5-3; J Nevotus (Cz) bl L Rich ova (Cz) 8-4, 6-2; M Soles (US) bl | Seles (Ron) w/o, M Slates (US) bl | Schulz-Market

GIRO D'ITALIA: Pitts stage (Metaponto to Crotone, 196km): 1, A Edo (Sp) Kelme Shr thin 59ac; 2, M Strazzer (I) Bresciata; 3, S Martinello (II) Sapo; 4, G Lombard (II) Potil; 5, A Baill (II) Mape; 6, M Traversoni (II) Carrer all same time. Leeding overalls 1, Martinollo 34hr 15min Iraversoni (it) Carrèra all same time. Levelling coveralla I, Martinollo 34th (Icmin 24ees: 2. Zannii at 16aes: 3. Guidi 22: 4. Edo 24; 5. Bordernei Same time; 6. D Bra-mati (it) Panaria 36 all same time in Brandi Lilskie: Third stage (Mazamet to Severac-lo-Chaisau. 180km): 1. F. Moncas-sin (Fr) Gan 4th 44min 48ees: 2. M Van Hesswick (Nath) Molorola; 3. A Tchmii (Ukr) Lotto; 4, K Ozers (Lat) Motorola; 5. R

8.45 (2m 3/ Hdis): 1, SILVER STAR-DARD, S Wyme (4-1); 2, Ramadish (8-4 lav), 3, Sevec (5-1), 8 ran. 5, 10, 17 For-sier) Tote: L6,00; C2,00; C1, 10, C1-40, Dani F: 255 10, Tric. C1,280, CSF; C13, 14, Tricast C41.45, NR: Secret Four. PLACEPOT: C18.00. QUADPOT: E10.80. Badminton UTTOXETER

Baseball

SASCOANI
AMERICAN LEAGUS: Kansas City 6, Do-hroit 4: Texas 6, Minnesota 5, Chicago 2, Toronio 1 (in 11); Sosidie 6, Boston 1; Mit-wauker 10, Choreland 8, Baltimore 10, Cal-fornia 5: Cakland 5, New York 1 NATIONAL LEAGUSE Cincimate 4, Flor-ida 1; Alfante 9, Chicago 4; Colorado 6, Pilisburgh 3: Montreal 4, San Francisco 3; SI Louis 5, Houston 2, New York 3, Los Angeles 2; San Diogo 9, Philadelphia 2. Cricket

BANK HOOG TROPHY: Belgrer: Lance 124 (Smith 6-32). Derbys 71-3 Derbys won on faster scoring rate. Underdige: Northents 271-7 (A J Swann 77, J N Snaps 79) Middx
119-5 (Snaps 5-40). Middx won on faster scoring rate Senthamptone Glamorgan 204-3 (A W Evans 105no) Hants 20-0.
Abandonod, Walksall; Leics 153-5 v Minor Counties, Abandoned

Equestrianism

Evening Racing

8.15 (2m 21 Hdfe): 1, PEYER MONANY, D Bridgwater (4-9 fav): 2, Backy Boo 15-1): 3, Kutan (12-1). 11 ran. 3, 7, (M Ppby Tole: 17 SP. 21, 0; 21, 0, 22, 10, Dual F £2.50, Tno: £5.80, CSF: £3.91, 6.45 (2m 3! Ch): 1, ABAYA (4-1 thv); 2, Charmal Pastimo (6-1); 2, Mino's An Ace (6-1), 10 ran, 10, 2 (R Frost) Total £4.70; £1.60, £3.00, £1.60, Dual £ £1.91, Trico £48.40, CSF £31.93, Tricost £170.84

7745 (20 74 Ch): 1, MARPHIMA GALE, A P McCoy (8-4); 2, Evangelian (13-8 fay): 3, Trust Deed (10-1), 11 ran. 9.4 (N Mitchell): 7016: 23 10; 21,10, 21,50, 21,50, Duat F 22,90, Trie: £4,00, C8F 28,39. Dua F E2-90, Tric: £4.00, GSF DR.39. 8.16 (3m 2f Mddp) 7, MARLE DEBRING, C Llewellyn (7-2); 2, Ablymann (7-1); 3, Wreckloss Man (7-1); 9-4 fav its Grand. 12 ran. 7, 2. (N Twiston-Davies) Tols: £6.00; £2.50, £1.80, £2.50, Duaj F £20.60. Tric: £8.10 CSF, £27.97, Tricast £152.30. NR: Philaidic.

11:00. CSF* (23:0), NN: MRS CORT.
9.00 (2m 44 Helin) 1, BSCTERBOR PROFRUSS, C Mauche (4-6 lav); 2, Broomshift Say (20-7); 3, January Johns (7-7), 7 an, 4, 6, N Twiston-Davies) Tota: (1.80; $1.80;
$5.40 Dual P: $14.40. CSF: $1.30;
PLACEPOT: $118.70. QUADPOT: $5.10. Fixtures

Cricket

Sport in brief

Injured Muster may miss French Open

THOMAS MUSTER, the world No. 2, sprained his right ankle THOMAS MUSTER, the world No. 2, spramed his right analyduring a routine warm-up for an Austrian tournament match yesterday and may be unable to defend his French Open title in Paris next week. The 28-year-old Austrian, beaten only three times on clay in the past two years and recently Italian Open champton for the third year in a row, immediately withdrew from the quarter-finals of the St Polten Grand Prix, where he had been due to meet the Italian Andrea Gaudenzi.

The men's No. 1 Pete Sampras also had a painful day. Com-plaining of a back injury, the American pulled out of his World Team Cup match against Richard Krajicek in Düsseldorf. "I have had a stiff back since I came to Europe," he said.

Wigan beef up for Bath

WIGAN will field two former rugby union internationals in their 15-man side for the second leg of their cross-code challenge to Bath, urices Paul Fitzpatrick. Wigan, 82-6 winners in the league-rules game at Maine Road, come to Twickenham tomorrow with Valega Tuigamala, the former All Black wing, and Shem Tatupu, a World Cup player for Western Samoa, in the pack. Henry Paul will partner Gary Connolly in the centre and Joe Lydon returns at fly-half. If Shaun Edwards is rested — he has a rib injury — Craig Murdock will replace him and Andy Farrell will wear the captain's armband.

The Australian media tycoon Rupert Murdoch is to appeal against the Australian ban until the year 2000 on his breakaway Super League, a development which revives the possibility of play-offs involving leading English clubs in October.

Top athletes tested six times

Jonathan Edwards and Kelly Holmes, Britain's most successful athletes last season, were also the most frequently tested for drugs. Figures released yesterday show that both were tested six times — four times at meetings and twice out of competition. All tests were negative, as were the IAAF's tests on 64 other British athletes. Limford Christie and Tony Jarrett also had six tests. There were five for Colin Jackson and four for Mick Hill, Dalton Grant, Steve Smith and Paula Radcliffe.

Spaniard wins Italian stage

Angel Edo of Spain won the fifth stage of the Giro d'Italia yesterday by heading a mass sprint to Crotone. Silvio Martinello, third home, retained the leader's pink jersey with 80 cyclists less than 30 seconds behind him. Today's stage to Catanzaro in Calabria includes two mountain passes.

Graeme Obree's defence of his national 4,000 metres pursuit title will be the highlight of this weekend's British Track Cycling

China back in badminton final

China reached their seventh consecutive Uber Cup final in women's badminton with a 5–0 drubbing of Denmark, who were competing in their first semi-final since 1984. Indonesia beat South Korea 4-1 to set up a repeat of the 1994 final, which they won at home. This year's final will be in Hong Kong.

New-look GB hockey team

Great Britain's hockey management team, installed yesterday on the departure of the coach David Whitaker, have omitted Guy Fordham and included Jason Lee for Britain's match against Germany, the Olympic champions, at Milton Keynes on Sunday, urites Pat Rowley. Teddington's men, in Prague, and Slough ladies, at Russelsheim in Germany, represent England in the European Club Championship over the next four days.

QS SQUAD: Gook S Mason, D Licker. Defence J Wyst, J Halls, So P McClyrs. Midfield: J Lee, K Takher, R Garcia, J Shaw. Attecto R Thompson, C Mayer, C Giles, D Hall

Rugby Union

Kerr offer puts onus on Brittle

Robert Armstrong

ONALD KERR, chief negotiator for the leading clubs in their bitter dispute with Twickenham, has offered to stand down from the next round of talks if today's emergency meeting of the Rugby Football League's full committee ends in deadlock. But he will do so only if his RFU counterpart Cliff Brittle does likewise in a common attempt to reach an early settlement. In a statement yesterday on behalf of the English Profes-sional Rugby Union Clubs, Kerr acknowledged the possibility that a personality clash between himself and Brittle might be preventing an agree-ment. Kerr has met with a series of rebuffs from Brittle during the past two months and his offer might be seen as a means of removing the hardline chairman of the RFU executive committee from the

According to Kerr the lead-ing clubs, were they to accept Brittle's peace formula, would enjoy less autonomous power within the RFU next season

Cast C30.89. NR: Aumite Alice.
7.30 (3m 2f Ch): 1, WENKERMQALE, A Durwood (4-5 tav); 22. Frazes Drop (7-1); 3. Disensed Fort (5-2). 6 ran. 6, 2 (tar. 1); 34. Disensed Fort (5-2). 6 ran. 6, 3. (tar. 1); 12. Disensed Fort (5-2). 6 ran. 6, 3. (tar. 1); 12. Disensed Fort (5-2). 6 ran. 6, 3. (tar. 1); 12. Disensed Fort (1-4). Disensed Fort (1-4). 15 ran. 5, 2 (M Tornkins) Total ESS20; 22.20, 22.70. 22.80. Dual F. 128.10. Trip: 138.60. CSF: 137 14. Tricost: 138.61. 7 ran. 5, 2 (M Tornkins) Total ESS20; 22.0, 22.70. 22.80. Dual F. 128.10. Trip: 138.60. CSF: 137 14. Tricost: 138.61. 1, FACTOR TEM, J F. Tidey (13-8); 2, Disensed Matte (5-4 fav); 3, Filmany Truth (6-1). 6 ran. 7, 12. (Miss H. Knight) Total 12.20: 11.40. C.1.30. Dual F. 11.60. CSF: 13.81. NR: Walts Court. Kerr insisted it was "not a question of an ultimatum" to

Rugby Super League All the latest News 0930 168+ General 970

Bradford 971 Leeds 972 St Helens 973 Warrington 974 Wigan 975 Wakefield 976

the RFU but a genuine attempt by the clubs "to get the professional game off the ground" after the Interna-tional Board's decision in Paris last August

The top clubs' demand for a significant share of television income and greater control of competitions in which they participate may be difficult for the backwoodsmen to stomach. But key members of the committee such as Colin Herridge, the RFU's chair-man of marketing who has been nominated for the important post of treasurer, do accept Kerr's assurance that the clubs are not simply "power mad" but rather represent the best interests of the first-class game. Herridge is cautiously optimistic about the outcome, which he feels may well include a firm plan of action for next season.

The alternative to a clear committee mandate to the clubs would be a frantic summer scramble by rival factions in pursuit of sponsors and television companies willing to risk the wrath of Twickenham and do an independent deal with the clubs. A growing feeling of war-than they formerly did as weariness among committee members of the National members combined with the members of the Massaciation.

Clubs' Association.

The clubs' statement warned of the "final break-up of the union" should the RFU's 63-man committee repositive decimal a positive decimal and the property of the union of the u

> Cricket News and Scores 0891 22 88+

Counties update Derbyshire 31 Middlese 32 Northants, 41

35 Surrey tempshire 38 Sussex 38 Worcester 39 Yorkshire Complete county scores

0891 22 88 30

@The Guardian

id club intgor

7 50

.......

Lewis enjoys a rich return Fastest finger in a white coat

Mike Selvey

Friday May 24 194

for Bath

ested six times

s Italian stage

s badminton final

3 hockey team offer puts on Brittle

17. --

POUC

68+

*** 471

4.2

***

0891 221

PRODIGAL crick-eter returned to the England fold yesterday. As the promised rain began to mist in across the ground. Chris Lewis, enigmatic, mercurial and a man whose career has seen enough false dawns to drive a rooster doolally with confu-sion, produced a devastating sion, produced a devastating spell of seam bowling that has probably set the seal on the first limited-overs international. India were asked to chase 292 to win. Fed a new-ball diet of dross, they had set off at such a scorching pace that they must have been thinking about employing re-entry shields. But in 21 balls Lewis, shirt-tails flying, took four shields. But in 21 oalis Lewis, shirt-tails flying, took four wickets for six runs, Peter Martin chipped in with the crucial wicket of Sachin Tendulkar when the little genius seemed set on running away with the match, and by the time the weather put paid to play India had slumped from 54 for no wicket to 96 for five Everything depends now on the captain Mohammad Azharuddin, discomforted by a finger injury sustained in the tourists' final warm-up match but unbeaten with 15, and Ajay Jadeja on 11. Earlier Graeme Hick's un-spectacular but utterly com-petent 91, ended in the penul-petent 91, ended in the penul-timate over, provided the bedrock of the England in-nings. With support from Graham Thorpe (26), a bustling thump of 40 from Mark Ealham, including successive sixes from Tendul-kar's medium page 39 not out kar's medium pace, 29 not out from Lewis and 37 most fortunate runs from Alistair Brown, they reached 291 for eight, heights that at one time seemed unlikely. On a seamers' day Anil Kumble bowled two overs. Rathore hit the his wrist spin with wonderful new bowler for three boundcontrol and took two for 29 aries in his first over, 15 com-

And that makes four . . . India's Manjrekar walks after playing on as Chris Lewis completes his haul yesterday off 21 balls at a cost of six runs FRANK BARCH from his 10 overs.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of overs.

voured with relish, taking 15 again when Kumble, an exoff the first over. When Cork was replaced by Martin after two overs, Rathore hit the new bowler for three bound voured with relish, taking 15 again when Kumble, an exbeen heading down the leg from Javagal Srinath, a highside. Tendulkar's 30 had come from 19 halls.

Lewis was not yet finished,
however. Mike Atherton,
however. Mike Atherton,

It was Martin, however, one of the few England players to emerge with credit from the knowing that Navjot Sidhu can be a mighty hitter of spin but is reputed to be suspect against pace, crowded the If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day cricket, it could be found in the start of India's innings. This was a pitch with pace, bounce and, significantly, a little movement, that had offered encouragement to any pace bowler who knew his onions. Yet, for whatever reason — nerves, perhaps, or strikess — Dominic Cork served up a succession of balfvoolleys which Tendulkar de-little and the start of India's innings.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day covers.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day covers.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day covers.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day covers.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day covers.

If example was needed on how quickly the balance of power can shift in one-day covers.

But the transformation also overs.

But the transformation also to be suspect against pace, crowded the heaviest blow to lidian short leg and then saw Lewis tear through a tentative forward this system he altempted to be daring the ed of the winter, beaviest blow to lidian hopes. With the adrenalin coursing through his system he altempted to be suspect against pace, crowded the new batsman with a short leg and then saw Lewis tear through a tentative forward the sam Lewis saw: that was ended only when Paras Mhambrey working the ball into the stump. When, in Lewis's neath to the different the against pace, crowded the new batsman with a short leg and then saw Lewis tear through a tentative forward prod to clip the top of the off stump. When, in Lewis's neath to were, lowing the ball into the stump. When, in Lewis's neath to were, lowing the ball into the stump. When, in Lewis's neath to were, lowing the ball into the stump. When, in Lewis's neath to were stump, were an interesting the ball into the stump. When, in Lewis's neath to were stump, were s dozen championship innings.

apart from the hundred against Derbyshire.

had with unerring timing stroked 11 fours. He and Byas added 128 against a minimum of bad balls by Kent's perse-vering attack. Byas was more circumspect, eyeing the vari-ous bowlers as if back at Kilham checking on the livestock. He has, in appearance and attitude, the reassuring solidarity of the farmer he is through the winter months.

Byas went, like Bevan, to Nick Preston, who earlier put an end to Anthony McGrath's championship.

Eighteen overs were lost through rain and bad light. At the close Yorkshire were 261

In just over two hours he

sad. With any luck the bowlers might have scuppered the England top order. Brown was dropped at slip off his second ball and then played an innings of forment — outlasting Atherton and Neil Smith, both of whom played well — that was ended only when Paras Mhambrey mercifully bowled him with an inswinger. Brown plays he clumped Tendulkar high over long-off, did he break

ANCASHIRE stepped up

the pressure on Ray

Illingworth yesterday by asking Lord's to start disci-plinary proceedings against the chairman of selectors

Illingworth is already the subject of a Test and County Cricket Board disciplinary inquiry over his book One-Man Committee and its criticism of the fast bowler Devon Malcolm. Lancashire are under stood to be upset at references in the book to the county's England captain

Michael Atherton, believ-ing the comments are in breach of the board's

Bob Bennett said he had in-formed Atherton and Lancashire's former coach David Lloyd, now coach of England, of the decision.

The county's chairman regulations.

writes Paul Fitzpatrick.

Illingworth's book upsets

Lancashire

deals with most problems with a fudge and a wink, must be complimented on this occasion.
With rain and bad light always likely to bring play to a premature close yesterday they took positive.

Wark Ealham's 40, with

As far as cricketers are concerned umpires are either "outers" or "not outers". Ray Julian, stand-ing in his first interna-tional match in his 60th so full of devil that it would clearly have reduced all three stumps to smouldering sawdust. Weary likes to take a back seat which has sometimes brought him poor marks lian is around.

Julian is as positive as you can get. He has gentle eyes and a kind smile; the quick-draw artists usually do. One can imagine him loafing on some tumble-weed-strewn street corner in High Noon. In the lastreel shoot-out be would come up against Sam Cook, the old Gloucestershire um-pire. "Never sweep when Sam is standing," batsmen were warned; the spring-loaded finger would go up. At Cardiff in 1986, in a match between Glamorgan and Sussex, Julian gave eight successive lbw deci-sions, and vesterdey we sions, and yesterday we had a cameo from the ageing gunslinger. Sachin Ten-dulkar had raced to 30 from only 19 deliveries and was threatening to take the game away from England when Julian upheld an lbw appeal from Peter Martin. The ball was going down; it The ball was going down; it might even have missed another set of stumps.

At least there is no partiality about Julian; he fives them all out This for.

To bet 1N R Morgis, J Schath, P Mhambrey, B K V Prasad

Ewellen; Cork 3-0-21-0; Lewis 8 1-0-40-4, Martin 6-0-20-1.

fires them all out. This for- | Umphres: A Julian and P Willey.

Paul Weaver at The Oval on Ray Julian, a gunslinger umpire

The Test and County Cricket Board, which dask with most numb.

mer Leicestershire wicketkeeper, who made his debut in 1953, is in his 25th year on the umpires' list.

He said yesterday: "It's been a wonderful day. "It's been a wonderful day. The way Tendulkar started off I thought it would be all over by five o'clock."

England's ninch hats

day, they took positive action to hurry the match along. They appointed a pinch-umpire.

It wo sixes and three fours, was more impressive. On Wednesday the tip was that he would not even play.

"I was given my cap and sweater on Wednesday but I didn't wear them until outers". Ray Julian, standing in his first international match in his 60th year. is an "outer", the Kent all-rounder hit a Sunday league hundred from only 41 balls, with seven sixes and nine fours. But he broke his favourite one-day bat last week.

bowlers will tell you that to where my cricket is conget a leg-before out of Dickie you really have to hit somewhere between middle-and-leg and middle-and-off. It is an approach make sure he is bowling and not batting when Ju-

Scoreboard

Today 18 45)
EMCLAND

M A Atherion c Mongia b Presad 13
A D Brown b Mhambrey 27
N M K Smith c Terdullar b Mhambrey 17
G A Hick c Manjrekar b Srinath 91
G P Thorpe c Mongia b Jadeja 28
R vani c Prasad b Kumble 21
M A Esikam b Kumble 21
M A Esikam b Kumble 20
G C Lewer not out 29
D G Cork not out 5
Esiras (bt., bt.1, w11, nb1) 24

Bowling: Srinath 10-1-45-1; Presad 10-1-63-1; Mhambrey 9-0-68-2; Kumble 10-1-29-2; Tendulkar 6-0-44-0; Jadeja 5-0-29-1.

INDIANS

Cold clubs for Montgomerie

David Davies at Wentworth

HE incredible shrinking man that is Colin Montgomerie — 38lb gone and more going — is not exactly working off his weight on the golf course. On the eve of the £1 million Volvo PGA Championship here he revealed that his preparation had not included a practice round "because I'm perfectly happy with my game".

Montgomerie, who has just finished competing in both the Benson and Hedges event and the Andersen Consulting World Championship, added: "I think I've played enough recently, and in any case I'm not the best practiser in the game. There are a lot of guys out there beating balls until six at night and that eventually breeds less quality and more quantity. I think they are wasting their time."

Always a minimalist when it comes to practice, the Scot remains confident about his chances this week. "There's nothing I don't know about the course," he said, "and I've had two second places and lost a play-off here. It's time I

Montgomerie is one former leading amateur who has succeeded in the professional game. Gordon Sherry, at Wentworth by special invitation, is another who is taking his first, and seemingly faltering, footsteps in the same dimensional seeming of the same di Montgomerie is one former rection. At his maiden event, the B & H last week, he man-aged to upset both his playing partners, Frank Nobilo and Sandy Lyle. "He's got to learn the com-mon courtesies of golf," Nobilo said yesterday. "He Despite all that, Went-was walking across lines worth's greens put others in on the greens, practiceswinging when we were playing, and I thought seri-tour's first major of the year.

ously about reporting him.
"This is our livelihood, it's not like weekend golf," added the New Zealander, who is the New Zealance, was paired with Sherry again today and tomorrow. "We criticise spectators for distracting us; you don't expect it inside the ropes."
Eventually Lyle and Nobilo

settled for a few quiet words with Sherry's caddie, with instructions to pass them on. "Everyone," said Nobilo, "de-serves a second chance." "The only thing I was told about," said Sherry later,

I'd never heard of that before. I'm not aware of doing any thing else that I shouldn't behind with our preparations," the course superinten-dent Chris Kennedy said yes-blowing for so long. It's very rare for it to be so cold at this time of year.

degrees all the time."
Kennedy has also suffered

STELLA ARTOIS GRASSCOURT CHAMPIONSHIPS QUEENS CLUB 10th-16th June BOOK TICKETS NOW

TICKE /// SIET

0171 413 1414

Championship: Kent v Yorkshire

Kent left uneasy by Byas

David Foot at Canterbury

RADITIONALLY at the St Lawrence ground there has been as much affection for left-handers as for the steadfast old third-man tree. itself. Even yesterday, bewhiskered members were talking of Woolley's wristy el-egance as if they had seen every one of his sublime prewar appearances here. But the left-handers syndroma makes Kent uneasy when working against the witness the stand of Michael Bevan and Yorkshire's cap-Bevan and Yorkshire's cap tain David Byas, which threatened to dominate the drives. Three wickets for Preston; and he had not previ-

Scoreboard

County Championship

pgineryaling v ESSEX Derbys Essex (1pt) have made a firm against Derbyshira (1).
ESSEX First benings
G A Gooch b Malcolm
D J Robinson c Kritken b Jones
N Husseln Bw b Harris

Abergaveenyz Glamorgan (Opt) have made 148 for five against Worcestershir (2).

LAMORGAN First Innings

third to go Kent's way. He is a "was not walking on the through-line behind a hole. paisman vibrantly in form and it came as an utter surprise when he top-edged to the close Yorkshire were 261 mid-on after scoring 80. This for five, with Blakey and Morwas his fourth fifty in half a ris averting late reverses.

Growing grass is not normally a problem in this temperate climate, but growing the right grass in the right place at the right time has been exceedingly difficult at Wentworth this year.

"We're around three weeks behind with our preparaterday, "because of the bitter north-east wind that has been another unusual problem, scarcity of rain. "You need plenty of it," he said. "Last April we had 4v; inches. This April we had half an inch." Despite all that, Wentthe area to shame and are in a fit state for the European

Total (for 4, 51.1 overs) 22.5 Patt of wtekets: 111, 111, 146, 199 To bast R C Russell, R P Davis, M C J Ball, A M Smith, C A Walah Bowling: M P Bickmell 21-4-74-1; Julian 22-6-81-2, Holilloake 4-14-0; Benjamin 7.1-2-28-0; Peanson 7-1-25-0.

MARWICKSHIRE V LEICESTERSHIRE debestos: Warwickshire (Opts) have rade 80 for 0 against Leicestershire (O). ARWICKSHIRE First Lenkage

Total (for 3, 62.3 overs) _______ 216
Full of whithers 6, 57, 209.
To bath D R C Law, P Moores, I D K Salizbury, V C Drakes, P W Jarvis, E S H Giddins.
Bowflags Fraser 16.3-5-28-0; Hewmi 11-3-43-1; Nash 10-1-44-1; Foliat 17-6-67-1; Tuinell 7-2-24-0; Weekes 1-0-2-0.

CALOUCES TERMINEE
First Indiags
A J Wright Day b Julian
N J Trainor Bw b Julian
N J Trainor Bw b Julian
T H C Hanook not out
T H C Hanook not out
A Symonds c Kersey b M P Bicknell
W Allsyne mot out
Edires (Ib1, w2, nb22)

Cantarburys Yorkshire (2pts) have m 281 for five against Kent (2).
YORKCSHIRE
Flest tenhings
A McGrath c Hooper b Preston
M P Yaughan a Hooper b McCagus
D Byas a Marsh b Preston
M G Bevan c Llong b Preston
C White a Hooper b McCagus
R J Blakey not out
A C Morris not out

HAMPSHRE & DUPHAM
Portamouths Hampshire (Opts) have made 192 for nine against Durham (4).
HAMPSHIRE First insides:
'J P Stephenson c Scott b Brown ... 0
JS Laney c Scott b Brown ... 23
K D James c Bienikron b Bebts ... 23
R Whithis b Wood ... ... 41
S D Udai live b Betts ... 5
R J Manu live h Wood ... 8
C A Connor c Boiling b Brown ... 42
S M Miliburn not out ... ... 12

Teentoes Northamptonshire (Opts) (made 82 for two against Somers) (NORTHAMPTORSHIRE First lands) R R Montgomerie s Rose b Caddick A Fordham t Turner b Shine R J Bailey not out OXPORD UNIV W NOTTHGRADESHIPE.
The Parks: Oxford University have scored 178 for three against Notlinghamshire.
OXPORD UnitVERSITY First Immings

and the second of the second o

Derbyshire v Essex

Harris cuts to the quick as Malcolm bristles than Illingworth might imag-ine. After Malcolm's destruc-tion of Glamorgan at Cardiff,

David Hopps at Derby

WHAT Devon Malcolm would have given to have had Raymond Illingworth in his sights yesterday. Subjected to an ill-timed bout of chuntering by the chairman of selectors, unconvinc-ingly dressed up as good oldfashioned Northern plain speaking, Derbyshire's Eng-land fast bowler had every incentive to rouse himself into

If there was no Illingworth, there was no imagworth, there was at least one of his messengers. Graham Gooch, newly elected to the selectorial panel, needed to wait only until Malcolm's third over of the day before his broken wicket provided evidence that the bowler has more pride it has been a satisfylng week. Essex have been heralded as championship challengers, but to find Derbyshire among the leading group is surpris-ing. The county hierarchy is disgusted that Illingworth has launched such a vehement attack while still in office, but a likely outcome, that Malcolm's England career has ended while his desire still burns fiercely, could help to keep them in contention. Few conclusions could be drawn from yesterday's truncated first day, which ended at tea with Essex 225 for duty, and DeFreitas, who is still not restored to full fit-ness from an elbow operation rica. But they have unearthed a diamond in the 22-year-old quick bowler Andrew Harris. Harris's figures held up im-pressively during a secondwicket stand of 158 in 59 overs between Robinson and Hussain. Robinson, initially the more reliable in a keenly contested morning, must have been aghast to fall on 74 to a non-turning off spinner when Derbyshire's captain. Jones was reduced to having an exploratory over himself.

Hussain, arresting a lean run, fell in the next over for at tea with Essex 225 for three.

Derbyshire's seam attack law to reassert Essex's supelacked Cork, on England riority before the rain came.

Don't be Caught out by Athlete's Foot

Always read the label. Contains miconazok. Available from your pharmactst. Daktarin is a registered trademark.

SportsGuardian

BARMBY'S GOALS RAISE THE STAKES FOR PLACES IN VENABLES' FINAL SQUAD

Chinese checked . . . Paul Gascoigne scores the third goal for England, after which the 65,000 crowd changed allegiance and started booing their team PHOTOGRAPH LAURENCE GRE

international match: China 0, England 3

Gazza leads the cavaicade

David Lacey sees two former Spurs guide the ground and every other found space at will be often allayed, principally because with a trumpet or a klaxon cul-de-sac. The ground and every other found space at will be often allayed, principally because the cul-de-sac. England through a shrill test in Beijing favours.

China syndromes without breakages in the Workers' Stadium here yesterday and did as much as any team could have in the circum stances to put themselves into a positive frame of mind for the European Championship.

now only a fortnight distant. If it seemed a long way to come to prove that Barmby fences and Adams is happier three, at least the team Terry Venables put out did its best to show him that the competi tion for places in his final

NGLAND survived | of the goals. In fact the match the shrillest of fast developed into a cavalcade of Spurs past and pres ent, with Walker eventually replacing Flowers, whose nervous keeping did him no

> With Sheringham, the Spurs player most crucial to Venables's plans for Euro 96, rested along with Seaman, Pearce, Ince and Platt, the evening could have become little more than a check on England's spare parts. Two things prevented this: the Gascoigne and Anderton, and the nature of the occasion. Play China at Wembley with the stadium two-thirds designed to perforate an eardrum at 10 paces, and the task is not so simple.

Refusing to become caught up in this attempt to re-enact the battle of the Imjin River, Venables's mixture of leading players, supporting players, spear-carriers and we'll-letyou-knows impressed as much through the composure of their football as through its ultimate effect.

Barmby, who did not score in his last 14 games for Mid-dlesbrough, may have ad-vanced his case for inclusion in the final squad by a couple was first-class," said Venables. Yet, while Barmby advanced in the hope of being recognised. McManaman at aged to reflect a hard-working performance in terms of goals, was set up by Beardsley, who had replaced Barmby, but squad of 22 is far from over.

Barmby scored twice and Gascoigne once, with Anderton heavily involved in each Beijing, with 65,000 packing surance, and where others would find life difficult in a

It was not the best of nights for Liverpool players. Gas-coigne's ebullient form led him all over the field and this, combined with Anderton's tendency to move into the middle, saw Redknapp often

Late in the game Fowler.

becoming a bystander.

Of the Neville brothers Gary looked the seasoned in-

Nobody left saying that if you'd seen one great ball you'd seen them all ternational, Philip the raw bles's players are at least en-recruit. To be fair to the younger Neville, however, he did frequently find himself up can be considered well and the constant of the second constant well and the constant of the second constant well and the constant of the second constant of the constant of against China's best player Hai Hai-Dong, whose speed when he moved to the right flank would have severely tested Pearce. However, despite Haiperiment to continue. As Venables said afterwards: "We thought they might play with just two up in attack but they played with three or four up,

This meant that Southgate,

ostensibly the replacement

ing centre-back, a role he ended up with a Villa team-mate. Ehiogu, the 27th new cap under Venables, along-so we had to adapt.

Dong's pace and some clever approach work, the Chinese struggled to find the quality of cross or final pass seriously to concern Adams and his defenders. In fact the overhis defenders. In fact the overall superiority of England's football had the crowd chang ing allegiance long before the end, booing the home team and cheering the visitors. No-body left the Workers' Stadium saying that if you had seen one great ball you had Seletion: ife sould berte crossed the bridge juggling the packe.

medium for ghost writers around Lord's long lead in these censorship definitions. Up to the players' new professional contracts, there was a N TOUR once, I came across Ian Botham. "Beefy," I asked. why are you looking so disgruntled?" Because, he said, "my ruddy ghost writer keeps sending back such a load of crap".

No happy

Another time, a few years later, I found Graham Gooch chuckling. Donald Carr, whose job at Lord's then (and still) takes in the vetting of players' books, had just telephoned about Graham's latest offering, which had just come out in paperback. "Gooch, old boy, I have just read Chapter Three about ranting West Indian politicians upsetting your cricket and I've blue-pencilled the lot of it," said censor Carr, or words to that effect. "Sorry about that, Donald," replied Gooch, "but this is the paperback; you allowed the very same words with flying colours in the hardback which has already been selling well for a year."

"Oh, did I?" said Donald. "T uppose I must have." The rumpus waiting to happen over Raymond Illingworth's forthcoming book

One-Man Committee, serial-ised in the Daily Express this week and nicely due out in early June precisely to coincide with the summer's first Test, might increase the gaiety of the nation as our loguacious Yorkie curmudgeon continues unavailingly to bite his tongue only by putting his foot in it. But if he wants to, why the net from the left. It was Gascoigne's first goal for England in three years and his first under Venables postshouldn't he? What gives Lord's the right to play rigid adult men say what they like declared a banner unfurled in about one another? What about free speech and the the crowd; not the happiest of right of reply? But cricket and feudal sentiments in this part of the world perhaps, but Vena-Lord's still like the Baden-Powell approach that, dib-dibdib, has no speaking about the cub camp. Where else does it happen? Look at politicians' daily personal abuse. And who would read showbiz or thes-

Way to Hotig Rong Wed Gum, Xe Hoos, Fan 2hiyl, Li Hong-Jun, Xe Yodog (Peng Wel-Geo, h-Q, Jang Feeg Sand Boo-Xun, Sanni), Li Beo Gu Ming, h-Q, Balling-Ye, Hao Hai-Doog, Geo Sers.

ENGLAND: Flowers (Bischburt; Walker, Tottenham, 84; G Nevelle (Marchester United), Adams (Arsens; Enloge, Aston Villa, 76), Seettisgate (Aston Villa), P. Meville (Marchester United), Adamson (Parchester United), Ad pians' memoirs if they weren't gloriously and wickedly bitchy about their co-stars? But cricket still demands that every player on the team must be seen to be as devoted to one another as blood prothers. Why? Real life's not like that. Rugby union is sniffing short period when anything columns by players merrily warmed the winters.

During the 1991 World Cup. England's then manager Geoff Cooke, with rather dismissive smarm, responded to a civil query from the man from the Times by saying: "Really, you should know you mustn't believe everything you read in the sports pages." Without a blink the man from the Thunderer replied: "Mr Cooke, 90 per cent of what I read in the sports pages these days seems to be written by your players." In the England squad's brand-new code of conduct written into their salaried contracts, the Rugby Football Union has written in a clause which has a player liable to disciplinary action in the event of being found guilty "of broadcasting or writing in a defamatory way of opponents". What? If a fellow runs up and kicks you in the groin at Twickenham, can't you tell your ghost writer?

Just as Illingworth did to his when he admits to chivyying Malcolm — or "boilocking him", in the chairman of selectors' own phrase — during the weebegone tour of South Africa last winter. So let's hear Devon's ripe answer to that. We could go on forever with this knockabout stuff. And why not? And no censorship from Lord's either.

UT what's this? Surely Lord's judge and jury cannot let Chairman Ray get away with ordering blatant flouting of the sacred Laws of Cricket, Law 42 (8) unequivocally states that: "Umpires shall consider intimidation to be the deliberate bowling of fast short-pitched balls in-tended or likely to inflict phys ical injury on the striker. The relative skill of the striker consideration." In the fifth Test in Cape Town in January the South African teenager Paul Adams came in at No. 11, having had but two innings in a Test match before and having yet to score a rum. Yet chivalrous Devon's lawabiding bowling had the chair-man apoplectic, as we learned this week. "What more could Malcolm ask for? A new ball against a No. 11, with an open channels of the chair. chequebook to run in and knock him over. Adams got only one proper bouncer from Malcolm, who had been ordered to pepper him."

Got him. Open and shut.
C'mon. Donald, start jangling Lord's keys to that dungeon.

Sun sets on Korean dream move

John Duncan and Grahame Lloyd

THE football season may be over in Wales but the repercussions of last Sunday's Welsh Cup final continue to reverberate through the valleys. That final was won by the village side Llansantffraid, against all the odds, 3-2 on

No. 6. Rope Trick.

to catch the train home

after work — on the way back he had bought two four packs of Ruddles

County. As he was late and due to miss the train

he decided to use a short small rope bridge.

Bill knew that the cut which took him over a trips across the bridge

As if that were not glory enough, their top striker and assistant manager Tomni Morgan was immediately offered a big-money move to South Korea, an agent for a Seoul club hav-ing faxed Wales with an offer after seeing the cup penalties against all-con-quering Barry Town. The vision. "The player must be mid-Wales village team very fast, have good physi-ously interested. The drawn," he said glumly.

Ruddles County Riddles.

Bill Allen was running bridge could only support be missed the train.

181 lbs - Bill knew he weighed 180, and the four packs one pound

each - Bill decided the only way to get himself and his beloved County

across was to make two carrying one pack at a time. But by doing this apartment, car, medical in-surance and air ticket for him and his family during the two-year contract; tax is only five per cent." Great, thought Morgan, a 58 — spritely, athletic, skilbuilding society manager in Aberystwyth, having at rising sun set on his ambifirst feared the fax was a joke. "When it turned out to be genuine I was obvi-

When he told his wife

Angie, who is a circus performer, why he was late, she immediately

came up with a solution to solve his dilemma.

Can you work out

Angie's solution?

now qualify for Europe cal strength, good shooting and good technique," the fax read. "The club would provide an a coach there to be interested speaks volumes."
Sadly, this is the point where things started to go wrong. When it was gently pointed out that Morgan is tions. "Unfortunately when they discovered my age their offer was with-

Guardian Crossword No 20,661

Set by Custos

After Gascoigne had gone close in the second minute, Barmby put England ahead beyond the half-hour. Anderton sent him through and he scored from the rebound after his first shot hit a post

Barmby's second, seven minutes after half-time, owed much to Anderton's clever ball to Gascoigne and another pass that caught the defence square. For England's third goal, 11 minutes later, Gas-coigne allowed a ball from Anderton to run across him before cleverly guiding it into

"England The Dogz Bollox"

the English expat section of Meat dish, cold, I study with anxiety when around the North (6,3,5) 9 Prescribe a quiet drink containing a drop of orange (7) 10 Former empress appearing in extravagant sari, naturally

11 Suction tube showing blamishes, on reflection (5) 12 Handsome lover to sue after break-up (9) 13 Knife, say, holy man plunged into frozen fish (4,5)

14 Holiday island, separate, Di's abandoned (5)

15 Car finally stuck in a byway in N. Ireland (5) 17 Comic tale I certainly produce when out of work (2,7)

20 A harpy worried about policeman returning for some spurious books (9)

23 At home an admirer cheers an exotic princess (7)

24 Quite exciting, perhaps, tho' this is questionable (7) 25 All unit, after conflict, has flushed look, showing peevish attitude (3-11)

Down 1 Form One name a vessel in ancient language (9,5)

2 Rogue turning over foreign money creates hazard (7) 3 Let out without assistance was devastated (4,5)

4 The thing found in a mea that can be quoted (7) 5 Game in which Helen grips flexible bat (7) 6 A role that's distinct (5)

7 Disgusting negative is shown before the 'Ouse (7)

8 Part of make-up causing

I I C

Allbert to spot you in short bursts (5.9)

14 Curvaceous, shed tears about a petty quarrel (9) 16 As many as a saloon, say, will hold, with space mostly crammed (7)

17 Sounds like an idiot to find flaws in paving material (7) 18 Thrash causing agitation around the Orient (7)

19 Exalt Union's leader with

Solution temorrow

The Stuck? Then call our solutions line on 0891 338 238. Calls cost 39p per min. cheap rate, 49p per min at all other times. Service supplied by ATS

21 An indefinite number in control will stabilise one's blood pressure (5)

<sup>ns</sup>ide